The New York Market Shows Further Upward Tendency in Cottons, Linens, Woolen Materials

But we are prepared to distribute our present stocks at practically old prices. We cannot prevent goods advancing in the primary markets, but we can and did prepare to protect our patrons' interests by buying large quantities of the most wanted goods on the low market basis.

It took a great deal of money to carry out this plan and forced us to carry a much heavier stock than in normal market times, but the public and our patrons will profit. Many items in the stock are now selling for less than New York prices. Take advantage while you can.

RELICS OF PIONEER DAYS ARE FOUND.

Historic Residence Gives Way To March of Progress in City of Danville.

Danville, Ky., Nov. 20.—(Special.)—The march of progress demolished one of Danville's oldest and most renowned residences. The house, which is being wrecked in order to construct an up-to-date building, is the old home- stead of the Crutcheild sisters, who died several years ago, both being in their 92d year. The house was built in 1798 and possessed all the characteristics of the architecture of those pioneer days, being constructed of logs and having only two windows.

After the death of the maiden owners the old residence was closed, and upon its being opened several days ago many relics and curios of the olden days were found, all of which were sold at handsome prices. In an old trunk of the primitive type was found the following antiquated relic: A Cincinnati Enquirer containing a story of the trial of Aaron Burr, a 3-cent piece of the date of 1609, a Spanish dollar dated 1715, as well as many "bits" and half-pennies.

One of the most valuable relics was an old muslin dress made in 1798 and which had been worn by the past three generations of the Crutcheild family. The Misses Crutcheild were two maiden sisters, whose ancestors came to this city in the beginning of the Nineteenth century from Virginia.
In the beginning of last century halibut emigrated to deeper and deeper waters, until they are now caught in depths of 150 to 300 fathoms in deep sea valleys.

SALE OF CHRISTMAS STAMPS BEGINS SOON.

Mrs. Charles P. Weaver Heads the Woman's Committee Named To Promote Sale of Stickers.

Christmas stamps will be sold for use on all sorts of holiday letters and packages, and the proceeds will be used to stamp out tuberculosis in Louisville. These beautiful and well-known stamps were sold last year, and that meant that a good many people took part. "The efforts of those who realize the extent of the ravages of tuberculosis," said a member of the Christmas stamp committee yesterday, "are getting results, though, of course, it takes time to see them. But whereas the city, with a population of from 200,000 to 225,000, had a loss from that cause of 500 a year, the number of deaths now is much less than that, although the city is larger."

The popularity of the Christmas stamp is attributed to two things. One is the fact that it is a holiday contribution which represents, in its appearance, the spirit of Christmas cheer, and the other is that it adds to the holiday greeting a message to those who, directly or indirectly, have been stricken by the plague. It not only has a message of cheer, but it does something to warrant it.

The Christmas stamp committee, which has announced that the sale of the stamps will begin Saturday, December 4, had a meeting yesterday afternoon at the residence of W. C. Nones, former president of the Louisville Anti-Tuberculosis Association. Mr. Nones has been confined to his home by illness, but is taking an active part in the work of planning the Christmas sale.
It is expected that the sales this year will reach 500,000.
Mrs. Charles P. Weaver, who has been chairman of the woman's committee for the Christmas stamp sale, has asked the following well-known women to serve with her on that committee, which will promote the distribution of the stamps in every way possible and request their use upon social communications to as large a degree as can be secured:

MRS. JAMES
Sam P. Jones, J. F. Taylor, Roy Wilhoit, P. N. Clark, Leonard McCabe, John Thirion, Thomas Morrison, Bush C. Watkins, Seth Nones, G. H. Canham, D. M. Starks.
A meeting of the committee has been called for next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at The Beecham, when it will be organized and the work before it discussed. The sale of the stamps will begin Saturday, December 4.

In British Columbia platinum is found in many of the alluvial gold workings, where it can be saved as a by-product. The saving of it in a small way is, however, attended with so much trouble that it has been practically neglected and no appreciable production made recently.
A new paving material devised by a Frenchman consists of the iron shavings from lathes, and similar chips, which are mixed with cement, making a combination which is almost indestructible.

How I Took The Hair Off My Face

The Same, Sure Remedy Which Cured Me Will Be Sent You FREE—It Will Not Burn or Injure the Skin.

Don't Use a Razor. "Yes, there was a time when I could hardly bear to look at myself in the glass," said a well-known model beauty. "It was hideous and I knew it and my friends knew it, even if they said nothing to me."

"I don't care whether it's just a few stray hairs or a full-fledged mustache, hair on a woman's face will spoil her beauty. That's all there is to that. I knew, of course, I tried the electric needle and all the other remedies I ever heard of. And, of course, the hair came back. It always will with such remedies. They don't really kill the hair. They just burn it off the surface and stimulate the roots. Sometimes just a few days later it grows back again with a vengeance. I tried to face anybody with that horrible growth on my face and chin. I was about to give up in despair, when some friend sent me a bottle of Electrolysis. I had faith in it, and I used it. I used it, but it took just one treatment to convince me. The way that hair came off was a marvel, and so matter how long I left the remedy on it would not burn or smart. That's the secret of its success. You can leave it on long enough to reach the roots and kill the hair and a cure with Electrolysis. See my face. See my face as it is soft and smooth as a little child's and it's been months since I cured myself. If you don't believe this, just try Electrolysis and see."

We want every reader of this paper who is troubled with superfluous hair to prove this sure remedy just as thousands of others have done. It is a permanent, lasting cure, not merely temporary relief. Electrolysis does not do all we claim. It is necessary to get a free trial bottle to see just how it works. The cover cost of mailing. The regular sized bottle is $1.00 and your money will be refunded if Electrolysis does not do all we claim. We don't ask you to take our word for what we say. We want you to try out the Trial Coupon and mail with a two-cent stamp to-day.

FREE TREATMENT
Fill in your name and address on dotted lines below and send to K. R. K. Co., 210 State St., Louisville, Ky., enclosing two-cent stamp to help cover mailing and we will send you at once a free trial bottle of Electrolysis. It will show you just how it works. Do for you. B. 248.

ON NOVEMBER 11

MISS SCHWITZER AND MR. GUTHRIE WERE MARRIED.

Other Marriages That Have Taken Place In Jeffersonville Recently.

A special from Cincinnati yesterday morning stating that Iveson O. Guthrie, of Louisville, had lost his wallet and $400 on his wedding trip by boat, brought out an announcement of the marriage in Jeffersonville on November 11, by Magistrate James S. Kelgwin. At the time of the elopement, the bride was Miss Leah Schwitter, of Cincinnati, and the groom was Iveson O. Guthrie, of Louisville. The bride was 25 years old and the groom was 26 years old. They were both of good family. Her father, who is dead, was Joseph Schwitter, an ice dealer.

Ira I. Brubaker, a mechanic, and Miss Belle McGee, both of Louisville, were married in Jeffersonville Friday night by Magistrate Charles S. Hart. The bridegroom was born in Wabash, Ind., 26 years ago next January, and is a son of Joel Brubaker, a farmer, who lives near North Whitley, Ind. Brubaker was divorced from a former wife on October 15, 1908. The bride was born in Bullitt county, Ky., and became a last month. She is a daughter of John McGee, a carpenter.

Jesse Wells, who is employed by a cooperage company, and Miss Carrie L. Gibbs, both of Louisville, were married by Magistrate James S. Kelgwin in Jeffersonville Friday night. The bridegroom is a native of London, Ky., and will be 22 years old in January. The bride was born in Bullitt county, Ky., and became a last month. She is a daughter of Luther Gibbs, a cooper.

FUNERAL OF YOUNG COLLINS HAYDEN SMITH.

The funeral of Collins Hayden Smith, the 6-year-old son of Jesse Yeager Smith, who was killed by a Jeffersonville car while playing in the street near Ballard's mill, at Broadway and Beargrass creek, Friday, shortly before noon, will be conducted this afternoon from the family residence, 912 East Chestnut street, with burial in Cave Hill cemetery. The lad was a pupil of the Broadway and Shelby street public school and six of his former playmates will act as pallbearers. Young Smith was an unusually bright child and his tragic death was a source of great sorrow to his teachers and companions.

SALE OF FRANCHISES POSTPONED YESTERDAY.

The sales of what are known as the Pike Campbell franchises advertised by the old Board of Public Works to take place at noon yesterday were called off by the new Board of Public Works on the grounds that the members wanted to look into the matter and know what they were doing before they sold any franchises. The franchises were for the purpose of selling refrigeration and steam heat within the square bounded by Fourth avenue and Fifth street and Green and Walnut streets.

AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK STOCK AT $139 1/2.

In the quoting of thirty-five shares of stock of the American National Bank as having sold for $139 1/2 a share an error was made. The type should have made the sale read $129 1/2. The stock was sold Friday and the error appeared in the paper yesterday morning.

FIXED

For Free Roads In Charles-town Township.

ATTITUDE OF SUPREME COURT OF INDIANA.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR MRS. MONTGOMERY.

THOMAS J. COMBS IS DEAD.

Attorneys in Jeffersonville, who have given the question considerable study, with a few exceptions, are of the opinion that any further attempt to build more than fifty miles of free gravel roads in Charlestown township and a short stretch north from Borden in Wood township, will be contrary to law. For the Charlestown township bonds amounting to $62,000 have been issued and are ready for delivery to the purchasers, Wedding & Co. of Indianapolis, after a long litigation. To build the road in Wood township bonds amounting to $10,000 are ready for delivery to the Martinsburg State Bank, that corporation owning the road, but there has been an attempt to enjoin the Board of County Commissioners from issuing bonds on which to build the road. The opinion expressed are based on a decision rendered by the Supreme Court of Indiana on a case taken from Hamilton county, where there had been an attempt to enjoin the Board of County Commissioners from issuing bonds on which to build the road. This was one of the steps taken in Clark county concerning the Charlestown township bonds, but there was no contention in Wood township. Judge Joseph H. Shea, to whom the case in Clark county had been assigned, denied the application for a preliminary writ of mandamus to prevent the sale of the bonds of $62,000 worth of bonds on the ground they had not yet been printed and there was nothing for him to stop. On this the bonds were printed and are ready for delivery, or practically as such.

The Supreme Court of Indiana, it is claimed, stops all work on gravel roads now being built or about to be on the ground the law providing for the building of free gravel roads by township taxation is unconstitutional. The opinion does not take up the question of the amended highway act of 1905, but it is held by the court that it is unconstitutional as a whole in authorizing the township to levy a tax for the purpose of building free gravel roads. The opinion is based on the fact that the township is a political subdivision of the state and has no right to levy a tax for the purpose of building free gravel roads. The opinion is based on the fact that the township is a political subdivision of the state and has no right to levy a tax for the purpose of building free gravel roads.

In Oregon township there was such a feeling that in some instances households were divided and relatives became estranged. Those who lived in the vicinity of Marysville would get all the benefits, while the taxpayers residing near New Market, the older town of the county, would pay a good part of the costs and still be left with bad highways. The movement in Oregon township was to have a referendum on the question of whether or not to build free gravel roads. The feeling that was aroused still exists to some extent yet.

The Supreme Court holds that the law as enacted is unconstitutional because it only provides for gravel roads to be constructed by taxation on "a petition signed by a majority of the freeholders and voters of any township which includes any incorporated city or town having a population of less than 30,000 inhabitants, and in which there is no other town or city with a population of fewer than 30,000; second, every and all townships which have no incorporated city or town within their limits, and in which there is no other town or city with a population of fewer than 30,000; third, every township which has a population of fewer than 30,000, and in which there is no other town or city with a population of fewer than 30,000; The Universal Wrecking Company is a great modern American institution. There are no old-time merchandise ideas about their methods. CAN'T PROFIT BY HIS OWN WRONG

So Holds Judge Kirby As To Suits For Divorce.

Rules Both Ways In Louisville Hite's Action.

Judge Miller States Important Point of Law.

IN THE COURTS YESTERDAY.

Judge Samuel B. Kirby, before whom will be heard the suit of Louis Hite against Mrs. Mamie H. Hite for an absolute decree of divorce, yesterday rendered a short memorandum opinion in which he indicated the wrong that the plaintiff should proceed. Mrs. Hite last spring was granted a decree of separation from bed and board. The rulings were purely technical and the case was not on the merits. The case was then dismissed. The plaintiff is now seeking a divorce on the ground of desertion. Of interest is the following memorandum opinion written by Judge Kirby:

"While the statute allows a divorce upon the simple ground of living apart for five years, it is not to be construed as a license to permit a man to take advantage of his wife. A court will not put such a construction upon a statute unless impelled so to do by the facts of the case."

"Even then a court would hesitate to enforce such a law and degrade itself by allowing its process and machinery to be used to the detriment of the public. The court of appeals in Stevens against Stevens. The court uses this language in the concluding paragraph of the opinion:

"He can not, and should not now be permitted by his own wrongful acts to so distort the facts as to manufacture grounds upon which a court of equity would divorce him from his wife."

"In that case the husband and wife had actually lived separate and apart for five years, although he deceived her as to his intentions. I can make no distinction between the case of that husband and the wrong of any other husband who forces a separation from his wife. They are both in the wrong and none may take advantage of his own wrong. Certainly a court of equity will not help him to do so when the matter is distinctly called to the court's attention."

"The first ruling was to the effect that the plaintiff need not have made the contest as a condition to the suit of his wife and that failure so to proceed does not bar his action now. The second was the overruling of the demurrer to Mrs. Hite's answer pleading that the plaintiff could not properly ask for the decree on grounds directly due to his own fault."

$30,000 Out of $8,000.

In an opinion handed down yesterday Judge Kirby directs how creditors of the Jefferson County Electric Company shall proceed in their collection of aggregate claims of about $30,000 from assets of about $8,000. The opinion comes in the case of the Jefferson County Electric Company against the Jefferson County Company, which was organized as an adjunct to the White City Company and which supplied that concern with its electricity. The Jefferson County Company sought to collect something over $15,000 and the claims of the other creditors were joined in the issue.

The chief point of issue in the suit and which was decided by Judge Kirby is taken to be that the claim of the First National Bank, which asserted a mortgage of $15,000 is not a prior lien. His opinion indicates, as it is read by attorneys interested, that the bank took the mortgage with notice that the other creditors had prior liens and therefore cannot have the first claim. The original claims amounted to more than $30,000, but as they have been narrowed down the figure is approximately $30,000.

As the opinion is read the United States Trust Company, for purely trust purposes, amounting to something under $1,000, has the first lien; the F. A. Clegg Company, with an original claim of $4,500, has the second lien; the Ridgeway Dynamite and Engineering Company, with an original claim of $2,900, comes third; the Jefferson County Electric Company, with its original claim of $15,000, comes fourth; the First National Bank, with its $14,000 claim, fifth; and Charles Doherty, to whom claims of $5,000 had been assigned, is sixth. The second and third claimants had mechanic's liens. The asset of the Jefferson County Electric Company are represented by $8,000 which has been paid into court.

Plaintiff Plumber Wins Suit.

Verdict in favor of M. G. Vandiver and against Peter Lee and the Atherton Realty Company for $4,938.32 was given yesterday afternoon by a jury in Judge Gordon's court, after the case had been on trial for several days. The evidence was completed on Friday and arguments heard yesterday. The plaintiff sued for balance on his bill while the defendants entered a counterclaim for more money than the plaintiff asked. As a party to the suit was Fair Dood, trustee in bankruptcy of the plaintiff.

According to the papers in the suit the original contract price was $10,800. This was increased, the plaintiff said, by extra work and verbal orders for changes in the specifications until the total bill was $16,469.01. Of this the plaintiff, $10,770.69 was paid, leaving a balance due and unpaid of $5,698.32. In the counterclaim the defendants said that the extra work and changed specifications made the bill amount to $16,727.27. The defendants said they paid $17,144.34 to the plaintiff, which was $417.07 more than was coming to them. Further, it was asserted that the defendant had paid an additional $5,398.23 to take care of liens against the building, which grew out of charges of material men against the plumber. This gave defendant a claim of $5,698.32 against the plaintiff's claim of $5,698.32.

Mrs. Gibbs Asks Big Damages.

Twenty-one thousand dollars as damages are asked in three suits filed in the Circuit Clerk's office yesterday by Mrs. Emma B. Gibbs, who was given some unpleasant notoriety during the recent campaign under the name of "Pearl Gibbs." Two of the suits ask for $10,000 each and are directed against Col. J. H. Haager, former chief of police, and his bondsmen, W. H. Netherland and J. T. Wendell, and against Patrolman Jacob F. Brown, and his bondsmen, Jacob Gast and George Schoeffler. The third suit asks for $1,000 as damages and is directed against Patrolman Edward R. Stark and his bondsmen, Rich G. Tafel and Lee P. Spies. Stark's bond is for $1,000 only and for that reason the sum prayed for is limited.

Except for the names and the other particulars mentioned, the suits are identical. The plaintiff sets forth that on August 9, last, as she was sitting in her house at Twelfth and Walnut streets, the defendants arrested her without any cause whatever, and restrained her for three hours in jail. She says she was tried on the charge of keeping a disorderly house, that the police held her to the grand jury and that she was dismissed by that body as being without fault. In all the cases she pleads that the alleged wrongful acts of the defendants damaged her.

Four Decrees of Divorce.

The Chancery, Judge Miller and Judge Kirby, yesterday handed down the following four decrees of divorce at Joint Session:

George H. Brown from Ida Brown, for five years' separation. They were married in Louisville on December 14, 1900.

Martha Hagland from Mathew Hagland, for abandonment. They were married April 3, 1901, and lived together until March 23, 1908. The plaintiff is restored to her maiden name of Martha Depp.

Clarence Koehnroth from Belle Koehnroth, for abandonment. They were married on April 23, 1905, and lived together until July 16, 1906.

Katherine Marquet from John M. Marquet, for abandonment. They were married in Haywards, Ind., on May 6, 1896, and lived together until July 10, 1908. The plaintiff is granted custody of her three children.

The following were dismissed:

Judge Kirby dismissed the suit of Henrietta M. Payne against Richard Payne on account of insufficient proof. The plaintiff charged abandonment. They were married on September 28, 1896.

The divorce suit of Mrs. Minnie Rich, against George Rich, was set out of court on the ruling of Judge Miller, who held so for the reason that the plaintiff may have been at fault and that she did not allege wasting of his estate, omissions which, the court said, led the plaintiff not stating a cause of action. The two were married on September 11, 1907, and have one child, a son, Robert Richard, of whom the plaintiff asked custody. She charged drunkenness for more than one year and non-support.

New Law Point for Kentucky.

According to Nathan Kahn, attorney for the defendant in the case, Judge Miller's ruling is a step in that proceeding yesterday was the first definition of a certain point of law in Kentucky that can get the question to the Court of Appeals. The ruling in effect is that where an employee has taken the bankruptcy law his action bars any proceeding against his employer to realize on an assignment of wages made by the employee before he was adjudged a bankrupt. The suit was that of Joseph Levy against the Louisville Company, by which the plaintiff sought to recover something under $300 that an employee of the defendant had assigned to the plaintiff out of his (the employee's) wages.

The magistrates' courts heretofore have held adversely to Judge Miller's ruling of yesterday, and the Court of Appeals, Mr. Kahn said, has never passed on the question at all. Out of necessity the money involved in such proceedings is small, and $300 must be involved before such a case can get to the Supreme Court of the State.

Lavell Green Files Agreement.

Lavell B. Green, named as life beneficiary to something over $50,000 by the will of his aunt, Mrs. Corintha G. Platt, on condition that he agree to abide by the provisions of the will, conformed to the conditions yesterday. In the County Court he filed a statement, duly witnessed and certified to, to the effect that he accepted the provisions of the will in all respects and waived his right of appeal from the probating of the document. Mrs. Platt was the widow of N. Sid Platt, and left at her death, an estate of about $75,000, directing that Mr. Green should have the income from the residue, which was estimated at over $50,000, while he lived, on the conditions he has agreed to. At his death the property is to be divided between the United Church of the Messiah, Louisville and the Association Sanatorium at Waverly Hill.

$6,000 Not Excessive Damages.

Judge Gordon yesterday overruled a motion for a new trial in the case of George Kimbel, defendant, Mrs. S. B. Curry, plaintiff, a 10-year-old daughter, a Mabel Kimbel, who was killed at St. Matthews by an L. and N. train, and in which a jury in his court last month gave the plaintiff damages of $6,000. Judge Gordon held that the damages were not excessive.

Estate Goes To Four Sons.

By the terms of her will, dated May 13, of this year, and probated in the County Court yesterday, Mrs. S. B. Curry leaves all her property to her four sons, Delores P. Curry, Clarence G. Curry, James B. Curry, and John Curry, equally. She named the two first-named beneficiaries as executors. However, the executors of the will were not fixed yesterday and they did not qualify.

One Murder Indictment.

The grand jury returned but one indictment yesterday before adjournment to-morrow. That was against Claude Turner, charged with the murder of Philip Sullivan on October 2. The case was held to the grand jury by the Police Court. The place of housebreaking against John Ducker was investigated and dismissed.

Court Paragraphs.

Katherine Schneider sued Jacob Schneider for divorce, alleging cruel treatment and asking for the restoration of her maiden name of Katherine Katzmann. The date of their marriage is not given.

Belitti Bartelme sued T. J. O'Connell for $2,000 as damages for injuries alleged to have been suffered while in the employ of the defendant.

Cornelia Greenly sued the Henderson House for $2,000 as damages, alleging that she was not provided with accommodations when she had to change cars at a certain station. Charles Lottie Hagun filed a similar suit, asking for damages of $2,000.

Chris Holder sued the Louisville Fire Brick Works for $10,000 as damages for injuries he received when in the employ of the defendant.

C. F. Geisler sued the Red Front Furniture Company for $138 and $75, the value of certain furniture of which the defendant is alleged wrongfully to have retained possession.

C. L. Daves sued the International Harvester Company of America for $253.75, alleged due him under a contract.

Henry Beck sued the Louisville Railway Company for $2,095 as damages for injuries he suffered when a car struck an automobile in which he rode. The same accident is responsible for another suit by Louis Beck in which $2,095 is asked.

Helen Frances Bates sued Henry T. Bates for divorce, alleging abandonment. She asks for the restoration of her maiden name of Williamson. The two were married on August 1, 1899, and lived together until April, 1908.

Will Connect With Burlington At Rocky Branch, Ill., and Run Trains To Metropolis.

Paducah, Ky., Nov. 20.—(Special.)—The Frisco railroad has let the contract for the extension of its line from Jopka, Ill., to Rocky Branch, Massac county, Ill., a distance of three miles. The Frisco will use the Burlington's tracks from Rocky Branch to Metropolis, and cross the bridge to be constructed at that point by the latter road.

The Herrin Southern, a branch of the Burlington, is now building from Herrin, Ill., to Metropolis, Ill., twelve miles below Paducah. It is reported here that the Burlington has advertised for bids for the extension. It will be one of the finest on the Ohio River, carrying two tracks, and the approximate cost is over $2,000,000. Boring for the foundation is now in progress.

Work on the Frisco will begin at once. The Chicago and Eastern Illinois, which is owned by the Frisco, now has a terminus at Jopka, Ill., twenty miles below Paducah, on the Ohio River, and eight miles below Metropolis.

The Big Four has a survey into Metropolis, and the Wabash is now surveying a line to that city. The Frisco and Burlington will connect at Paducah. One will use the tracks of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis road out of here and the other will connect with the Tennessee Central, which has just completed a survey from Hopkinsville, Ky., to this city.

FRANKLIN CORPORATION MAKES ASSIGNMENT.

Franklin, Ky., Nov. 20.—(Special.)—The Franklin Electric and Ice Company late this afternoon made an assignment, naming Warner Order, of Bowling Green, assignee. The first cost of the plant was $60,000, and the indebtedness, including a judgment for $5,000 recently obtained in the Simpson Circuit Court, amounts to $30,000. The plant is well equipped.

During the development, or growing period of life, the stomach is under greater strain than any other epoch, for the reason that bodily growth is rapid in children, and the system requires a considerable amount of material to construct new tissue—a much greater amount than in the adult. In the adult, all that is required is a sufficient quantity of food to rebuild the worn-out old tissues, but in children, an extra amount of well-digested, nutritious food is necessary to build up strong muscle, bone, cartilage, teeth, nerves, blood and brain.

Well-fed children with strong digestion, invariably grow to be large, powerful, healthy men and women, with sound minds and sound bodies, while children who are sickly, nervous, peevish, irritable, and continually "tired-out," are nearly always victims of indigestion, and never attain their full growth, or an average amount of strength, unless the stomach weakness is cured before reaching adult life.

During the adolescent, or formative period of life, parents should make every effort to build up their children with good health, a strong constitution, and an abundance of vim, vigor, vitality and energy may be an inheritance in later years. Too often the mistake is made of attempting to build up the bodies of weak, sickly children by dosing them with nerve and blood tonics, or the emulsion of cod-liver oil, which tend to upset the stomach and thus make matters worse.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS will build up any other epoch, for under-developed and slow-growing children, by digesting their food thoroughly and assisting its absorption and assimilation. They digest food of every kind very easily, including the vitalizing action of eggs, the richness of meats, the cream of milk and cheese, and the carbohydrates of bread, rice, potatoes, etc., so that the system is supplied with all the material which is essential to construct large bone, heavy muscle, strong nerves, a well-developed brain, rich red blood, and plenty of sound, healthy flesh, producing broad shoulders and a sturdy height and general development.

If you desire to have your children grow up big, strong, healthy and powerful in mind and body, see that their digestion is good, and that they are supplied with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal, in order that they may get the full benefit of the food they eat, and you will be rewarded by seeing them attain a far better than average development, and besides you may be saved many a doctor's bill.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists, price fifty cents. A free sample will be sent to you, if your name and address is forwarded to Dr. A. C. Stuart Company, 120 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Michigan.

PROPERTY RIGHTS

Cannot Be Determined by An Injunction.

FEDERAL JUDGE COCHRAN SO DECIDES AT FRANKFORT.

EDUCATORS TO MEET HERE.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 20.—(Special).—Property rights cannot be determined by an injunction, according to an opinion handed down to-day by Federal Judge A. M. J. Cochran, in the case of Richardson v. Richardson. The case was brought by the plaintiff, Mrs. Richardson, against the defendant, Judge Cochran, who had issued an injunction restraining the plaintiff from interfering with the personal liberty of the defendant. The opinion says that the petition does not allege that the property is owned by the plaintiff and that the ownership of property cannot be determined by injunction. The case was from Scott county, and it was in that case that a Lexington lawyer was named for contempt of court and a sentence resulted from allegations that the Richardson was being secreted in Cincinnati.

Circuit Clerk Criticized.

State Inspector and Examiner M. H. Thatcher to-day reported to Gov. Willson concerning his examination of the official books of the Circuit Clerk of Scott county, John W. Moore. The inspector reports that he collected the sum of $43.70 from County Clerk W. F. Hook, which was due the State, $53.32 from County Judge Henry Dehaven Moorman and that Circuit Clerk T. J. Moore owes the State the sum of $810.42. Concerning the latter official, Thatcher says: "Part of the fines named in the last indicated period, namely from January 1, 1908, to date, had been collected by the Clerk and had never been reported or even placed on his book of public funds, or any record kept of it whatsoever. In other of these cases, no record was given secretly in food or drink. On fine No. 2 in pill form is for those who wish to cure themselves. Orline costs only $1 a box. The guarantee is in each box. Write for Free Orline or Booklet (enclosed in plain sealed envelope) to Orline Co., 417 Orline Building, Washington, D. C. Orline is for sale in this city by Taylor & Isaac Drug Co., Third and Jefferson, and T. F. Taylor & Co. (Incorporated), 215 and 218 Fourth avenue, and corner Fourth and Chestnut.

reasonable excuse, nor can any be offered. His records have been kept with-out system, and are not in good shape, and he deserves the criticism now indicated."

Negro Tries to End Life.

Chagrined at his faulty memory when he forgot a portion of a declaration he was delivering at exercises in the institute chapel, Joseph Smith, a member of the senior class of the colored State Normal School here, attempted to commit suicide by drinking wood alcohol. Fortunately, the student was rescued by a fellow student who rushed to his aid and took him away from him in time to prevent him from getting a deadly dose of the poisonous fluid. After working with him, he was brought around, but his escape was narrow.

Secretary Thomas W. Vinson, of the Kentucky Educational Association, has

Why Do Men DRINK?

When you stop to think of the terrible results which come to men who indulge to excess in intoxicating beverages, you may ask, "Why do men drink?" The fact simply stated is, "Victims of the Drink Habit can no more resist liquor than a man with a gun can stop shooting."

Gilbert White, the artist who painted the lunettes for the new Capitol, reached Frankfort to-night with the paintings and they will be put in place at once.

called a meeting of the executive committee of the association to be held in Louisville on December 4, when the time and place for holding the next annual meeting of the association will be decided upon. Princeton and Henderson have both invited the educators to meet within their gates, and a selection will be made by the executive body at this meeting.

Souvenir of Ten Broeck.

A stirrup from the saddle worn by Ten Broeck when he raced against Mollie McCarty, in Louisville on July 4, 1878, is now in the possession of Marquis Mitchell, of Frankfort, and he would not take anything for his souvenir. Frank Harper, Ten Broeck's owner, gave the stirrup to Zack Mitchell, of Versailles, an uncle of Marquis Mitchell, and it came into the possession of the latter only recently. Zack Mitchell is said to have won a farm on the race between Ten Broeck and Mollie McCarty. The stirrup is much heavier than the ones they are now using on racing saddles, but is as bright and new as if it had just been made.

Frankfort Doctor Honored.

Dr. H. S. Keller, of Frankfort, this afternoon was appointed as a delegate from Kentucky to a meeting of the medical, educational and legal association in Chicago, beginning February 28. This is one of the most important medical meetings that will be held in this country and Kentucky has only one delegate.

JOKE ON THE SMITHS.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

Maj. F. A. Kendall tells of what he considered at the time the greatest practical joke ever played. The joker was a former college classmate of his named Smith, down in New York. Smith conceived the idea of having a lot of fun with the Smiths for the lack of originality about his own name had always amused him. He made the acquaintance of a long list of Smiths, few if any of whom knew each other. Then he arranged for a big party and invited tons of Smiths. Nobody was invited but Smiths. When the host started to introduce them, "Mr. Smith, this is Mr. Smith," or "Mr. Smith, Miss Smith," or "Mrs. Smith, Mr. Smith," the Smiths thought it was some joke—oh, but not the same joke that Smiths thought. Smiths were Smiths at all, but that they were being kidded about the name and all proceeded to get as mad as a dog. They went about asking each other: "What's the name of the Smiths?" and when the truth dawned on them and was confirmed, they all laughed and pulled all sorts of comedy out of the affair, and the Smith joke party was a big success.

Home Prescription

FORTIFIES NERVE FORCE FOR AILING PEOPLE.

This treatment is said to have acquired a wonderful reputation throughout the East, owing to its peculiar propensity to fortify the nerves of force and generate health and a consequent personal magnetism, so essential to the happiness of every normal human being. It is claimed to be a blessing to the nervous, depressed, nervous and who have trembling of the limbs, dizziness, heart palpitation, cold hands and feet, inability to venture and general inability to act rationally as others do. Also of vast benefit to writers, professional men, office workers and the victims of society's late hours and over-indulgence in wines, liquors, etc. By preparing the treatment at home secretly no one need know of another's trouble, while the ingredients are much used in filling various prescriptions, so that even the most sensitive of patients need occasion no timidity. If the reader desires to try it, get three ounces of ordinary syrup, a quart of water, and one ounce of the compound fluid (mainly milk and egg) and stand two hours; then get one ounce compound essence of cardiol and one ounce picture compound (not cod-liver oil), mix all together, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at night. This contains no opiates whatever and may also be used by women who suffer with their nerves with absolute certainty of prompt and lasting benefit.

AMERICAN MODELS BEST.

(Denver Times.)

"The models of New York excel those to be found anywhere else in the world," says E. H. Blasfield, the famous American artist, who designs more female models than any other artist in New York. "This is because New York is a cosmopolitan city, and we have models of all nationalities, the majority of them being foreign-born. For all that, our very best models and those nearest approaching the ideal are American girls. They are more apt to be all around good models than the girls from other countries."

"Living models are absolutely indispensable to the artist for he must be able to see the living example before him to throw life into his work. Beauty consists of so many different things. A woman may have well-nigh perfect features, an expression of stolidity will rob them of their effect. The figure is equally important. A woman with a bad back and round shoulders cannot altogether redeem her face from the charge of ugliness. "Even a bad walk or ungainly attitude may deprive a woman of her place among the beauties, and such a seemingly little thing as the pose of the hand may make one woman a beauty and another less beautiful."

OKLAHOMA HEIR DEAD.

(Muskegon, Okla., Special to Kansas City Times.)

Albert Leon Leiber, 4 years old, the eldest child in the State of Oklahoma, the son of John G. Leiber, died here recently of a throat ailment. The boy was of Indian extraction. His land allotment was in what later proved into the quarter section of land netted the land a bonus of $10,000. His royalties arising from oil from the wells amounted to nearly $5,000 a month. In addition to this he still owned the fee in the land. The property as it stands is probably worth a quarter million.

LAUGHING VOICES.

(John A. Joyce in Denver Republican.)
Of the loving, laughing voices
Of the past come back to me,
As I wander tired and lonely
O'er life's troubled, stormy sea;
And they bring me consolation
When all other joys are fled—
For I'm dying with the living,
And I'm living with the dead.
How the years have scarred my features;
And the ingrates turn my heart;
How the battle bayonets gleam;
Where I played the bravest part.
Yet those loving, laughing voices
Sound forever in mine ear,
And thrill my soul with pleasure
Every hour and day and year.
In the midnight of my sorrow
Far away from friends and home,
I can hear those laughing voices
When in foreign lands I roam;
And their faces come to gladden
When all other joys have fled—Yea! I'm dying with the living,
And I'm living with the dead!

Cure For Drink Evil In Southern Towns

ALABAMA ABOUT TO TURN BACK ON PROHIBITION.

WANT RETENTION OF CRAFT.

Washington, Nov. 20.—(Special).—"I am convinced that most of the States that have passed drastic prohibition laws will be 'wet' again inside of two or three years," said J. G. Leonard, a prominent business man of Chicago, who has been in Alabama, where, he knows, perhaps the strictest laws against the sale of liquor of any State in the country, will, he believes, be one of the first to go 'wet'. There is every indication of it already. A few months ago it was next to impossible for even clubs to sell drinks, but now almost every club in the State is permitted to do so.

West Virginia's System. "West Virginia has the right idea in this regard. It will permit the saloons to have a license of $7,000 a year, and there are only two in the town. But these are conducted on a high plane and there is little or no intoxication. I think this is the highest license town in the country. Bristol and Bluefield, each has a license of $3,000 a year, and in the latter town there are no saloons conducted by negro men. The license in Parkersburg is $2,500 a year.

Strict Regulations.

"In all of these towns there are strict regulations for the running of saloons, and any violation means a severance of license. Once revoked, the license is not granted again, and this means that only reputable men are engaged in the saloon business. That the prohibition wave has not had the effect of decreasing the sale of liquor is a sure thing, for I am told that most of the large distilleries have more men on the road at this time than ever before."

Report On Stone Industry.

A report issued to-day by the Geological Survey on the stone industry and the manufacture of limestone in Kentucky shows that there is a falling off in the production of limestone in Kentucky as compared with the previous years. The value of the stone produced against about $1,000,000 in 1907. The sandstone produced in Kentucky amounted in value to $75,000, and no granite or marble is reported. Indiana produced in round numbers $3,000,000 worth of limestone, and Vermont's product last year, being valued at nearly $5,000,000.

Strong Effort to Retain Craft.

A strong effort is undoubtedly being made to have J. A. Craft retained in his position as Collector of Internal Revenue for the Louisville district. The fact that Ludlow F. Petty, of Shelbyville, is on the "slate" fixed up by Senator Bradley and the three Republican Congressmen from Kentucky. It is stated here to-day on high authority that friends of Mr. Craft are endeavoring to believe that President Taft is inclined to let him stay in office. At any rate the friends of the present Collector are known to be active, and some of them will not admit that he is going to be supplanted in the near future. If he should be relieved, however, it will be because the President feels that Senator Bradley should be recognized in his home district in that office. The prediction is still being freely made here that the "slate" will then be cracked in another place, and that Charles Berryman, of Fayette county, is likely to land in the Internal Revenue Collectorship in the Lexington district, now being held by Sam J. Roberts. It is evident from the activity of some of Senator Bradley's close political friends and supporters who have been in Lexington this week that they all feel it is necessary to put in their best bids for the "slate," and the point is vigorously made that Senator Bradley ought to be allowed to have his way in the selections for these big offices. However, the matter will not be long before the thing is settled.

THREE APPOINTMENTS

MADE BY THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS YESTERDAY.

Shumate Superintendent of Street-Cleaning Department—Will Kriel City Hall Janitor.

The Board of Public Works handed out a few juicy plums yesterday to those in waiting on the anxious seat, and who have been in suspense since the election of William O. Head as Mayor. William Shumate was appointed superintendent of the Street-Cleaning Department at a salary of $1,500 a year. He will succeed Harry T. Critchenden, who was appointed under the Grinstead administration. William Shumate was superintendent of the department under Grinstead, and was promoted from the position of assistant to the superintendent.

M. J. Quinn was appointed superintendent of the Public Works Department at a salary of $75 a month. He will succeed George J. Brown. He was Superintendent of the Public Works Department at the time of the late Mayor's death.

Will take charge of their positions to-morrow morning. William Kriel was appointed janitor of city hall at a salary of $30 a month. Mr. Kriel has been head janitor for three years of the Paul Jones building, up to the last of last year. Mr. Kriel took his commission at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and a notice which he said he would at once serve on W. H. Leonard, colored, the present janitor, to the effect that he would take charge at once. He wanted his time to begin from 12 o'clock last night.

Joseph Haering was appointed head engineer of city hall. His duties will be performed during the day and his assistant will have the night job. Mr. Haering said yesterday that he did

To the Progressive Piano Player Purchaser.

You who intend purchasing a player-piano know this: You're either going to be satisfied with your purchase when it's made, or dissatisfied. You'll be satisfied with the best—dissatisfied with the "just as good as." If you purchase a "just as good as" you'll eventually buy the best. Therefore you can save yourself a deal of unhappiness if you are very discriminating in the purchase of a player piano.

The Prime Requisites in a Player Piano are these:

EASE OF CONTROL DURABILITY

Control depends absolutely on the interior mechanism. If you have an interior mechanism that is absolutely and instantly responsive—that is, simple—then you have a player piano that enables ease of control.

FARRAND CECILIAN PLAYER PIANOS

have their interior construction of Metal, unaffected by heat or cold, moisture or dryness.

Cecilian Player Pianos are the only player pianos worthy of consideration, that are made in this satisfactory way. And remember, the Cecilian Player Piano plays the entire keyboard of 88 notes, not merely 65, as do the ordinary player pianos.

You'll buy a Cecilian Player Piano before you are entirely satisfied.

You might just as well take a short cut to satisfaction by buying one now.

AN INVITATION TO YOU

Come and examine the Cecilian Player Pianos in our warerooms—you will be our guest and you will not be importuned to buy.

COSTLY PRINTERS' ERRORS.

(New York Herald.)

Enormous sums of money are frequently expended by various governments to rectify errors, which are apparently trivial, in official printing. The United States, some years ago, destroyed 1,000,000 worth of money owing to the misprinting of a single word. In 1883 several hundred thousand greenbacks were destroyed, owing to the same cause. An employee was convicted for attempting to steal some of these worthless notes, with the intention of selling them to collectors. CONVICTED

Of Obstructing Registration At Lexington.

O. W. SHRYOCK GETS FINE AND JAIL SENTENCE.

CONTRACT LET FOR BURLEY PLANT AT FRANKFORT.

ODD FELLOW FORTY YEARS.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 20.—(Special.)—The jury in the case of O. W. Shryock, charged with malfeasance in office by delaying and hindering the registration of last October, returned a verdict this afternoon finding him guilty and fixing his punishment at $50 fine and sixty days in jail. This is the first conviction of any of the many indictments growing out of the recent election.

Shryock is assistant chief of the Lexington fire department, and he and Capt. C. W. Longmire were Democratic registration and election officers. Both were indicted on similar charges. In the trial of Capt. Longmire last week the jury failed to make a verdict. The trial of Shryock was begun Wednesday, and the list of witnesses included many of the leaders of the Democratic and Fusion parties. Immediately upon the announcement of the verdict, Shryock's attorneys made a motion for a new trial.

Redriving Plant For Frankfort.

The executive committee of the Burley Tobacco Company went into session here last night immediately upon the arrival of President Clarence LaBusa and Secretary G. A. Brooks from Winchester, where they had gone as witnesses in the receivership proceedings. A second session of the committee was held here to-day to receive delegations from various other towns of the Bluegrass asking for tobacco warehouses and redriving plants.

The executive board awarded a contract for a redriving plant and closed a deal for the property of the Franklin County Warehouse Company in Frankfort, where the plant will be operated. The transaction includes four lots adjoining the warehouse property, between $30,000 and $35,000 being represented in the proposed plant. It will have a capacity of 36,000 pounds in ten hours. Another committee from Georgetown submitted propositions for a redriving plant in Georgetown. Cynthia and Carlisle also are trying to secure similar plants. The executive board will meet again Tuesday.

No Action On Shipp Resolutions.

John C. Breckinridge Camp, of the United Confederate Veterans, met here to-day to take action on the sentencing for contempt of Sheriff Shipp, of Tennessee, to a term in prison by the United States Supreme Court. Resolutions were drawn, read and favorably considered, but at the suggestion of Capt. C. E. Bullock action was withheld for the present. Capt. Bullock urged delay because he thought it would be impracticable to petition President Taft, who, it was believed, would not likely undo what the Supreme Court did.

Seeks Damages.

Alleging that two agents of the Kentucky Trust and Security Company, the loan company, had, without cause, attacked and beaten him, L. P. Wade filed suit in the Fayette Circuit Court to-day against the company for $1,000 damages. Wade states in his petition that in May, 1909, he borrowed $5 of the company and had been unable to pay it back. The agents called on him to collect, and he says when he told them he could not pay they attacked him and beat him.

MUSICAL EVENTS

was his playing of the brilliant "A Flat Polonaise." This he took right up to time with a style and a bravura that carried the entire audience with it. The trying passage for the left hand he took with an evident ease that was positively astonishing.

To the storm of applause with which the audience responded to this work, and after several recalls, he gave as an encore a very finished performance of the little "A Major Prelude. The Toccatina by his master, Jonas, was a phenomenal example of virtuosity in miniature.

There can be no doubt as to Arriola's genius. He did things which would have been entirely impossible without it. And his genius greatly transcends mere mechanical ability. One watched closely and tried to detect if he were not a mere phenomenal machine, reproducing—parrot-like—what he had heard. But no such hypothesis could possibly account for the delicacy of sentiment with which he invested each passage of the nocturnes, the fire which he put into the polonaise, the eloquence with which he spoke of the questioning phrases of "Warrior" or the compelling atmosphere in his performance of the Liszt "Liebestraum." Again and again his phrasing and dynamic nuances were so remarkably the impulse and guiding of authentic feeling.

It is impossible to take away from such a recital that which one carries away from a performance by an artist who has matured through the experience of years, and who is equally certain that one did not come away from the recital with the feeling of having seen a child go through its well-learned lesson. The only explanation is that the child has genius.

He has been well trained in stage deportment, and appears entirely at ease and natural, which qualities it is to be hoped he will retain. If such a thing be possible under such circumstances.

On Sunday evening, November 28, the first of the series of musical services to be given by the city of St. Mark's Episcopal church will be sung sung.

At this service selections from the Stabat Mater will be heard. Those who heard this choir in its last winter performance will be glad to learn that the musical services are to be resumed, beginning with the 28th.

The soloists are Miss Eva Korb, soprano; Mrs. William Scholtz, contralto; Ralph Paht, tenor, and Joseph Ramser, baritone.

The choir is under the direction of Mrs. Robert M. Kerr.

PHILIP GIBBONS CRASHES THROUGH PLATE GLASS.

As Philip Gibbons, 17 years of age, was standing in front of Mace Goss' saloon, at Shelby street and Broadway, yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock, he was suddenly taken ill and, staggering backwards, crashed through the large glass window of the saloon.

Gibbons was picked up by men in the saloon and removed from his dangerous position, between large pieces of glass that were still hanging. It was found that he had struck the glass with his head and that he was badly cut about the face. He was bleeding profusely, but on examination it was found that no arteries had been severed, and so the lad was removed to his home, 912 East Chestnut street.

HEAVY RAINS CONTINUE ON ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.

Colon, Nov. 20.—Heavy rains continue on the Isthmus. The district from Gatun to Tavernilla, a distance of about twelve miles along the canal route, is under water. As a result the railroad trains were unable to pass beyond Gatun to-day.

Work on the canal is at a standstill throughout the flooded section. The rainfall so far this month on the Atlantic section has totaled more than twenty-six inches.

MISSIONARY MASS MEETING WILL BE THIS AFTERNOON.

Macaulay's Theater Likely To Be Filled When Programme Begins.

When Bishop Charles E. Woodcock calls the missionary mass-meeting to order in Macaulay's Theater at 3 o'clock this afternoon it is expected that every available place in the building will be filled. Judging from reports made to members of the Laymen's League this seems to be a certainty. Large delegations expect to come in from the various suburban parishes and each city parish is sure to be largely represented.

The Rt. Rev. John Newton McCormick, D. D., bishop of Western Michigan, is a Virginian by birth, and is a very pleasing and forcible speaker. Before his elevation to the episcopate he served as rector of churches in Virginia and nearby States, and at the time of his election as bishop was pastor of St. Mark's Cathedral, Grand Rapids, Mich. The Rev. George Craig Stewart, the rector of St. Luke's church, Evanston, Ill., has visited Louisville before, having at the invitation of the brotherhood of St. Andrew, visited the city to address the noon-day Lenten services at the Board of Trade building.

Nothing needs to be said to the Louisville people about the third speaker on the programme, since merely to state that Bishop Woodcock is a speaker is sufficient to insure a crowded audience. It has been arranged to have the choir of Christ Church Cathedral, under the personal direction of Ernest A. Simons, lead in the musical portion of the programme. A very important part of the programme will be the missionary offering. The Laymen's League believes thoroughly that no one can really be a Christian who is not vitally interested in the spread of Christ's kingdom to the uttermost ends of the world. The following is the programme:

Hymn 249—O. Zion, Hasten, Thy Mission High Fulfilling.

Address—The Rt. Rev. John N. McCormick, D. D., Grand Rapids, bishop of Western Michigan.

Hymn 261—Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun.

Address—The Rev. George Craig Stewart, rector of St. Luke's church.

Hymn 264—From Greenland's Icy Mountains.

Address—The Rt. Rev. Charles E. Woodcock, D. D., Louisville, bishop of Kentucky.

Offertory.

Hymn 263—Piling Out the Banner, Let It Flow.

Benediction.

J. M. HUFFAKER TO SPEAK TO PADUCAH ELKS.

Paducah, Ky., Nov. 20.—(Special.)—Joseph M. Huffaker, of Louisville, Commonwealth's Attorney of Jefferson county, will deliver the annual address at the Elks' memorial services to be held in the Kentucky Theater December 5. A large musical programme is being arranged.

Helps Bowels in Old Age; Sample Free

It is a problem with many old people how to keep themselves in health. Their prime trouble is with the stomach and bowels. When these become deranged bad health follows, because one cannot be constipated and feel good. Keep the bowels open—no better advice can be given to anyone, especially in old age. But it is well to know just what to take to relieve the distress. Those who speak from a long experience say that is best suited to the requirements of people of advancing age. These, like children and women, need a gentle, pleasant-tasting laxative, not a strong cathartic pill or a violent salt or purgative. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is mild but promptly effective and a guaranteed cure for chronic constipation, indigestion, drowsiness after eating, liver trouble, belching, sour stomach and the many other little ailments that follow a disordered stomach, liver or bowels. To convince anyone of its merits before buying a bottle in the regular way, a drug-gist, Dr. Caldwell will send a sample bottle free of charge on receipt of name and address. Try it yourself in the free sample and when you are satisfied that it is the remedy you want do not buy it of your drug-gist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. The latter is for family use and is bought by those who always keep it in the house, which thousands do.

DR. CALDWELL PERSONALLY WILL BE PLEASED TO GIVE YOU ANY MEDICAL ADVICE YOU MAY DESIRE FOR YOURSELF OR FAMILY PERTAINING TO THE STOMACH, LIVER OR BOWELS, ABSOLUTELY FREE OF CHARGE. EXPLAIN YOUR CASE IN A LETTER AND HE WILL REPLY TO YOU IN DETAIL. FOR THE FREE SAMPLE SIMPLY SEND YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS ON A POSTAL CARD OR OTHERWISE. FOR EITHER REQUEST THE DOCTOR'S ADDRESS IS DR. W. E. CALDWELL, R. 507, CALDWELL BLDG., MONTICELLO, ILL.

JAS. W. MOORE,
Clerk, Clothing Hotel, Columbus, Neb.

I received your sample of Syrup Pepsin and liked it all right. Am now buying of the drug-gist here. It is good in the cure of stomach trouble.—F. RHEA, Seneca, Mo.

ALL VINDICATED.

Maj. Colston, James Kinnarney, Sam Owens, Dismissed.

CHARGES AGAINST THEM FALL FLAT IN CRIMINAL COURT.

NONE APPEARED TO PROSECUTE IN APPEALS CASES.

RIGHT TO CARRY WEAPONS.

In the Criminal Court yesterday morning vindication was prompt and thorough for Maj. William A. Colston, James Kinnarney and Samuel C. Owens. Maj. Colston was arrested on the charge of obstructing the registration and, on an amended charge of disorderly conduct, fined $50 in the Police Court, and Mr. Kinnarney and Mr. Owens having been fined $20 and assessed thirty days in jail for carrying concealed deadly weapons. All three took appeals from the judgment of the Police Court. Prosecution was altogether lacking when the case of Maj. Colston, now a member of the Board of Public Works, was called, and Maj. Colston was dismissed. John Tipton nor Sgt. Buckley nor Patrolman Detective Heimerdinger was on hand, and they were all witnesses against him in the Police Court, and those who were responsible for the charge against him of obstructing registration.

Norton Goldsmith and Will O'Connor appeared in the interest of Maj. Colston in the Criminal Court yesterday and for no reason other than the prosecution except Lorraine C. Mix, Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney, whose duties kept him in the court. It was on his motion that the case against Maj. Colston was dismissed. He recommended such disposition of the case at the instance of witnesses, the prosecution. Furthermore, Maj. Colston, who has made counter charges against the policemen, did not appear against them in court and they showed him the same consideration.

Entitled To Carry Weapons.

In the cases against Mr. Kinnarney and Mr. Owens the court proceedings were a little more elaborate. They were dismissed by W. Allen Kinney, sitting as a special judge in the absence of Judge Joseph Pryor, and to whom the appealed cases were submitted on agreed facts. The two were proved to be regularly constituted deputy constables, and as such empowered by the law to go armed.

Lorraine Mix, Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney, said that the case was a matter of law and facts and he consented to submit it to the court. Clem W. Huggins, who appeared as attorney for the defendants, said he would admit that each had a weapon concealed, but that they were not armed. He asked for the records and Sam Richardson, Deputy Sheriff, went for book No. 70 of the County Court records and found that on November 14, 1907, Judge Peter, in his official capacity for the first time, administered the oath, having approved an amendment to the deputy constables by Robert T. Bartholomew, of the Fifth Magisterial district.

Here the attorneys looked up the law on the subject to be submitted to the court. Except for Mr. Mix no one appeared to prosecute. Ben Washer, formerly a newspaper man, recently having taken up the practice of law, presented them in Police Court. There, although the same records were offered in the Criminal Court yesterday, he submitted the case to the court. He stated, the sentence was passed. Further, also, Detective Slater and Patrolman Johnson, who appeared against Mr. Kinnarney and Mr. Owens, although they have since resigned, were not present in the Criminal Court yesterday.

The Law On the Question.

Following the reading of the records of the appointment of the defendants as constables, Mr. Huggins read the Kentucky court Section 1113 of the Kentucky Statutes, which provides that constables may carry concealed weapons, and Section 425, which provides that deputy constables may be named by the constable on the approval of the County Judge and that they shall have the same powers as the constable himself, and the constable's bondman be liable for any misdeeds of the deputies.

"The Commonwealth has nothing to contend for," said Mr. Mix in response to an interrogatory of the court. "I have looked up the law carefully and am unable to see anything else that the defendants are clearly given the right to carry weapons."

"We submit the case," said Mr. Huggins. Neither side offered any motions and the court then ruled:

"According to the facts admitted, these men were properly appointed and regularly qualified deputy constables, and the order of appointment has not been set aside. The law is clear on the subject and these defendants cannot be punished for doing what the law says they may do. Let the case be dismissed."

Friends of the two had contentedly expected such a decision, being familiar with the fact that Rembrandt and Mr. Owens were subjects of congratulation when the decision of the court was announced.

BALLAD OF THE SAINT.

(Theodora Garrison in Everybody's.)
The Little Cherubs whispered:
"What strange new soul is this
Who cometh with a robe besmired Unto the Place of Bliss?"
Then spoke the Eldest Angel:
"The robe he wears is fair and fine,
The groping fingers of the poor
Have held and blessed him there."

The Little Cherubs whispered:
"Who comes to be our guest
With dust about his garments' hem
And stains upon his breast?"
Then spoke the Eldest Angel:
"Most lovely is the stain—
The tears of those he comforted
Who may not weep again."

The Little Cherubs whispered:
"What strange, new soul is he Who cometh with a burden here
And bears it tenderly?"
Then spoke the Eldest Angel:
"He bears his life's award—
The burden of men's broken hearts
To place before the Lord."

"The dust upon his garments' hem—
'Tis lips shall hush no more
The statue upon the breast of him
Are gems thrice exquisite,
Oh! little foolish Cherubs,
What truth is this ye miss—
There comes no saint to Paradise
Who does not come like this."

When the balloting is over and the vote is canvassed the institution receiving the largest vote will be presented with $100 in cash by the store. This is probably an innovation in Louisville, and that it will win many new friends for the J. Bacon and Sons Company goes without saying. It will serve to bring out hundreds of people who never take an interest in bargain sales.

Many stock political phrases also are generally attributed to statesmen, but have had very different origin.

The greatest happiness of the greatest number" was adopted by the philosopher Priestley; the Rev. J. A. C. Brath, a Dublin professor, was the originator of the phrase "the great conformist conscience" first made known in a letter sent to the Times by William D. Dickson; Goldsmith's father of "Measures, not men," Napoleon III. first uttered the word "Pacifism" in 1848; the name of "Little Dorrit" was invented "Red tape," and the "Policy of the Peace" were the work of Charles Dickens; the French paper Le Matin was the whole lot of them may have sprung from the brain of some of our primitive man.

WOMEN WHO GIVE MILLIONS

(Van Norden Magazine.)

Although cold figures are repulsive to the matter of heart and charity, a table would show that almost a dozen women in her own way—have each given millions of dollars or more to the uplift of humanity:

Mrs. Russell Sage.	250,000
Mrs. J. A. Anderson.	1,500
Mrs. F. K. Vanderbilt.	1,000
Mrs. F. Penfold.	1,000
Miss Helen Gould.	18,000
Mrs. J. P. Morgan.	10,000
Miss Eliza O. Ropes.	2,000

they can be given in such a way that good will behind them is thought of. Another thing, the nice stationers at Alex. A woman's heart holds the key. I send gifts, women bring them. I send flowers, women bring them. I send sailors, or talks to lone watchmen on the railroad. I send them to the street where his family has to go. Mrs. Vanderbilt goes among the poor and the rich, and she is full of love and cheer; Miss Dodge meets the strange to the city at the station and she is full of love and cheer. (Washington Post.)

Armed with a pair of field glasses, an Alaskan, a full-blooded Eskimo, and a few years of age, has for several days been watching with interest the stooped jack of the city hall and repair men, the weather vane, and yesterday he terminated his nameless and clear inspection by a bird's-eye view of Alexandria. Following his resolution, Mr. Fisher was met by a group of women who had detected him had access to the door in the steeple and had copied the weather vane and the clock tower to the structure.

When Mr. Fisher's presence, nearly five feet above the ground, was discovered there was considerable alarm for his safety and a crowd of people gathered on the dizzy height the surrounding territory descended and announced that he had been seen.

Mr. Fisher is a veteran of the Mexican War, and was formerly connected with the First National Bank.

MINE WORK.

Judgment Shown by Man Behind the Dynamite.

HOW HOLES ARE DRILLED FOR THE CARTRIDGE.

BLASTS TIMED SO AS TO BE MORE EFFECTIVE.

DANGER IN THE MISS SHOTS.

In starting a shaft or tunnel the miner can use a pick for a few days to loosen the rocks and a shovel for moving them out of the way, but as soon as a solid stone is reached he is obliged to use a drill and to blast with dynamite, or, as miners call it, giant powder.

Black powder works more slowly and acts somewhat like a lever in penetrating into each crevice and prying on the rock like a wedge, while giant powder has the effect of a quick blow from a heavy hammer.

The holes for the powder are bored with a bar of steel from one to five feet long, of octagonal section, so as to give a better grip for the drill than if it were round. There are usually seven or eight sharp edges of an inch in diameter. The drill is called a bit, and is a cutter with a sharp edge and two angular corners.

In drilling a hole the bit is held in one hand and turned 'round and round' while at each turn it gives a blow on the steel with a hammer, which he holds in his other hand.

With each blow a small, triangular piece of the rock is cut out as a piece would be cut from a cake. Then the miner turns the drill and cuts the next slice. The slice of rock falls into powder, and water is poured in holes drilled downward so as to form more and more.

The holes from becoming clogged. The miner takes the mud out from time to time with a long and narrow spoon. In the holes driven upward the rock powder falls every time the miner turns the drill.

The bit wears out and becomes rounded more or less quickly, according to the hardness of the ground. On an average, according to an article in the Engineering Digest, the drills are sharpened each day. A drill is used in three to five holes.

Many Drills Used.

The miner starts with a drill one foot long, drills in some three or four inches, then takes a drill three feet long and keeps taking new drills each time three inches longer after he has bored a similar distance with the preceding drill. He ends with a drill six to nine inches longer than the depth of the hole.

The holes are drilled at an angle with the face to be blasted. The more slanting the hole the more the powder will have to do. A good miner will get the slant which will bring the bottom of the hole to the place where the powder will do its maximum work.

The holes are drilled from eighteen inches to three feet deep. An ordinary piece of the solid rock of powder of the shape and size of an ordinary candle, with both ends flat. There are usually thirty sticks in a ten-pound box, and as dynamite freezes at 40 degrees temperature the sticks are more or less stiff.

The powder is contained in strong, yellow paper, and the miner cuts it with his knife to give the stick a better chance to pack. The stick of powder is pushed into the hole and packed carefully with a long wooden stick. The powder is introduced cut in several places, the cap and the fuse going in with the stick. The fuse is cord of gutta percha containing in its center a column of fine gunpowder.

Terrific Explosions.

The miner lights the fuse and goes to some place of safety. During this time the black powder burns, the heat reaches the cap, explodes it and with it the giant powder. The explosion is terrific. The gases expand so as to occupy a space 20,000 times greater than that in which they were contained.

They thus develop a pressure of more than thirty tons a square inch, and force the solid rock to break into fragments to give them room to escape. The rocks are shivered, and the fragments, planes of fracture or numerous shivers, escape along which the rock breaks in a big chunk, and the miner is safe.

Many accidents are caused by miners saying, or it breaks into a thousand small pieces.

In everyday practice a miner drills

the Breath Pure.

The able researches of Dr. Stenhouse, published about the middle of the last century, excited considerable interest in charcoal, and it was wonderful absorbing powers. His experiments were directed at the decomposition of various gases, and the results showed that charcoal had the power of absorbing all the poisonous gases, and removing all the noxious exhalations from the putrefying matter.

Many other noted physicians have since that time investigated this absorbent and oxidizing action, and one of them, Dr. Hunter, has also published an account of his experiments, showing the relative amount of the various gases taken up by the different kinds of charcoal.

Both Stenhouse and Hunter experimented with charcoal made from poplar, boxwood, cocoon shells, willow wood and various other woods, and found that charcoal made from willow wood possessed by far the most power of absorbing, deodorizing, oxidizing and destroying foul gases. It may be added here that animal charcoal, which has been generally used as a decolorizing agent, is very inferior to wood charcoal as an absorbent and deodorant.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are composed of charcoal from the finest willow wood, the very best of all wood charcoal can be used for this purpose. The addition of pure honey to the charcoal renders them so palatable that no one can possibly object to their taste.

When they are taken into the stomach they do not lie inert and inactive, but get busy at once in the work of absorbing and oxidizing all foul gases, destroying disease germs, preventing the further formation of gases, removing all the noxious and decomposing of food, and leaving the stomach walls of catarrhal mucus.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are introduced into the mouth, where their cleansing action begins, rendering the breath pure and sweet, destroying all germs existing in the mouth, and removing tartar from the teeth.

Call upon your druggist over the phone, and ask him the opinion of the power of charcoal as a stomach cleanser, gas absorbent and breath purifier. Then request him to send you a box of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges for 25 cents. Also send us your name and address, and we will send you a trial sample free of charge. Address: J. Stuart Company, 200 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mo.

Only five of the States cast as many votes in a presidential election as the city of New York. The city of New York voted for Mayor at the last election. These States are Illinois, Mississippi, Ohio and Pennsylvania. In a majority of the States

the vote is not equal to that of either the city of New York or the State of New York.

Roughly speaking, the total vote for Mayor was 58,000. While that is the number of valid ballots which had to be counted, the number of votes actually cast was 100,000. The difference between the total number of votes and the number of valid ballots is due to the fact that many ballots were rejected as being invalid.

Stuffed Green Peppers.

Prepare the green peppers as described in the last recipe, but do not slice. Make a forcemeat of equal parts of boiled rice

and minced ham, and moisten with tomato sauce. Fill the peppers with this mixture and set them on and in a deep baking dish. Pour tomato sauce around them and bake for a half hour or until tender. Serve in the dish in which they were baked or transfer to a hot platter

and pour the thickened tomato sauce around them.

Rice and Peppers.

Boil one-half cup of rice in salted water, drain and set in a hot colander at the back of the stove. Prepare your peppers as above described and slice as for frying. Soak them in butter and chop them coarsely. Return them to the butter in which they were fried, add to this a little onion juice and three table-spoonsful of soup stock. When scalding put the rice in a vegetable dish and add a cup of cold water. Turn into porcelain-lined saucepan and set over the fire until the sugar is melted; then add a half teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Do not stir after the mixture begins to boil.

Cook steadily until a little dropped into cold water is brittle. Stir in a teaspoonful of vanilla extract and pour into a greased and chilled pan. As soon as it is cold enough to handle pull quickly into long strips, pulling each of these until very light in color.

the thumb and finger. Take from the beat in a teaspoonful of vanilla and stir

in briskly a cupful of pecan nut meats broken into coarse pieces. Drop by the

INCIDENTS CONNECTED WITH SURVEY OF THE OHIO RIVER LOOKING TO A NINE-FOOT STAGE

Member of Party Details Daily Routine From the Time of Leaving Louisville.

(Communicated.)
Within the memory of our fathers, the Ohio, as was the case of the other great waterways of our country, was the bearer of a large domestic commerce. Packets in those days made their trips with a frequency comparable to that of express trains to-day. It was no unusual thing to see a dozen packets loading or unloading the same day at the wharves of the busy river port. That such should have been the case is quite natural, for the Ohio was the one great natural way between the Atlantic coast and the interior. Cut-throat railway competition, shifting of channels, growth of bars, cost of wharves suitable for different levels of water, and the interference of levees and railroad bridges have since worked destruction to the river traffic, the confessed inability of the railroad companies to supply sufficient cars to move all the freight has made the canalization of our waterways, especially the Ohio and the Mississippi, imperative.

The ordinary man the river is nothing more than a body of water in which a skiff will float, but to the engineer or experienced riverman it is a self-propelling body, building sandbars, cutting banks, flooding towns after continued rains, and running low in times of drought, and always requiring control.

To control the river and direct navigation, the engineer must have accurate knowledge of the course of the river, the location of islands and sandbars, the varying depths of the river, and the situation of the channel, and the slope of the surface of the water. All this information, besides numerous and living quarters. Quarter boats Nos. 1 and 2 were capable of accommodating fifty men each.

In June, 1908, two complete parties were organized on board the quarter boats in the locks of the Louisville and Portland canal. The two parties were rather mixed, being composed of college graduates, farmers, Kentucky river log drivers, Spanish War and Philippine soldiers, bargemen and roustabouts, most of whom, however, had been on the survey before.

Party No. 1, of which the writer was a member, began work in the field on June 28, 1908, near Owenboro, where work was discontinued the previous fall, and party No. 2 began on the same day at the Willow Point, for such was the name of the place.

The daily routine was much as follows:

After breakfast we got all our instruments and equipment, including lunch, together, each party having previously tied its individual stuff to the tender. Then the Willow Point, for such was the euphonious name of the tender, steamed up or down the river according to where we had left off work the previous evening. Thus we were usually on our job—rowing, taking soundings, setting benchmarks, reading or recording angles, cutting paths through the woods, underbrush or cornfields as the case might be—before 8 o'clock, and kept steadily at it until 12 o'clock when we laid off for an hour's rest and lunch.

The floating equipment of the surveying parties below Louisville consisted of two large quarter boats, two tenders and the necessary number of small boats. A quarter boat is a large flat-bottomed boat without motive power, arranged for sleeping, cooking

ments and equipment, including lunch, together, each party having previously tied its individual stuff to the tender. The floating equipment of the surveying parties below Louisville consisted of two large quarter boats, two tenders and the necessary number of small boats. A quarter boat is a large flat-bottomed boat without motive power, arranged for sleeping, cooking

ments and equipment, including lunch, together, each party having previously tied its individual stuff to the tender. Then the Willow Point, for such was the euphonious name of the tender, steamed up or down the river according to where we had left off work the previous evening. Thus we were usually on our job—rowing, taking soundings, setting benchmarks, reading or recording angles, cutting paths through the woods, underbrush or cornfields as the case might be—before 8 o'clock, and kept steadily at it until 12 o'clock when we laid off for an hour's rest and lunch.

TON OF FUDGE

More Or Less, Wagered by High School Girls.

ALL HAVE FAVORITES IN GRID-IRON BATTLE.

NEW ALBANY SCHOOL'S PAPER ONE OF BEST.

AN ORCHESTRA ORGANIZED.

On the eve of the great Thanksgiving day struggle between the Purple and the Red for supremacy on the grid-iron, the interest waxed warmer in the city camps, but the enthusiasm of the ladies of the Girls' High School, surpassing that of all other years, is the surest augur that the fight is to be to the sword and sword to the hilt.

Every young man wears the colors of her team and defends its honor against all comers, for no one is so unfortunate as not to have a "circumstance" that fixes her decision for one or the other of the contestants. It may be a brother or a cousin, but more likely it is a friend—whose colors she proudly wears. And the girls are not passively interested in the fight; they are in it deep and strong, and, sad to say, many a well-meant argument ends in a spell of frets and frowns. These, however, soon pass away and smiles supplant the ugly frowns. On the whole, it is the most sportsmanlike kind of rooting and serving to incite the boys to increased effort in the great encounter.

Frowns Upon Partisanship.

It is a known fact that Prof. Bartholomew, principal of the Girls' High School, is not in favor of his students taking sides in the contest, but as the kindly professor knows that in this he asks the impossible, he only states his objection in the nature of a request that the girls do not wear the ribbons of their favorites. However, the fair devotees of the game and its finer points are hardly mistaken, for they can discuss the merits of the two teams as well as the most ardent football fans. Many of them have expertly learned the eleven compare as to size and weight and in a true business fashion draw their conclusions from these circumstances. How the fair maidens have learned all this technique of the game, many fond parents cannot understand, but one pretty little miss answered it conclusively. She said:

"Why, my goodness, how could I help not knowing all this? I never bear anything else. That is all I hear ever talks about. I get it going to and from school. Sunday night at church, yes, sir, right while the minister is preaching, and whenever he comes to call on me; but I never get tired. I am just crazy about the game. You know, 'he' is going to play, and you bet I will be right there to root him on to victory."

When the band plays merrily on next Thursday afternoon and the referee's whistle sounds clearly out over the great throng of loyal rooters and anxious spectators, gathered to watch the struggle at High School Park, it is expected that the conclusions from these circumstances, how the fair maidens have learned all this technique of the game, many fond parents cannot understand, but one pretty little miss answered it conclusively. She said:

"us," or shameful defeat for "you" are discussed, and then discussed some more.

One noticeable feature of the struggle and the sides taken by the girls enthusiastically, is the fact that they seem to be equally divided, from the most dignified senior to the little insignificant freshmen, they are hoping and betting that the team of their choice will surely carry the day.

Tons of Fudge Bet.

The betting is lively, too, not only among the girls themselves but many a wager has been made between some fair partisan and a rooster of the hostile echelon. The stakes range from a pretty watchfob, made by nimble little fingers to a nice, sweet box of home-made fudge on her side to something that papa's money can buy on his side.

Some of the girls say that they know many sure charms that will bring defeat to "those horrid" fellows against "us" and a glorious victory to "our" brave boys; but considering that the damsels are equally arrayed, it seems as though the guardian elves of these charms will have a terrible time casting the victory.

The November number of the Record, the organ of the Girls' High School, contains a delightful Thanksgiving day football story, by Helen Smythe, in which a frivolous miss betrays the confidence entrusted by an admirer, in order to bring victory to the team opposing his college; and although the story is timely it bears no significance in Louisville. No Kentucky girl, true to her home and ideals, would be guilty of such a shameful deed and if any of the impetuous beaux of either team have in a moment when Venus conquered Reason, divulged any secrets, they are as safe as if planted with Cook's records at the North Pole.

The girls consider their allegiance to the team of their choice as a matter of honor and no petty consideration would cause them to say a word or do a single act that would in any way jeopardize a victory.

Girls Understand Game.

The rival enthusiasts of Male and Manual realize the value of having a referee on their side and accordingly an unusually large amount of flowers and bonbons have helped to deplole the boy pockets. This, however, is not the cause of the interest on the part of the girls; it is only the methods used by mere men to insure the support of the gentler sex.

Those who think that the girls do not understand the game and its finer points are hardly mistaken, for they can discuss the merits of the two teams as well as the most ardent football fans. From Catarrh.

EX-CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON COMMENDS PERU-NA.

"I have used several bottles of Peru-na and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease. Thirty years' standing."—David Meekison.

OTHER REMARKABLE CASES.

Mr. Jacob L. Davis, Galena, Stone county, Mo., writes: "I have had health for thirty-seven years, and after taking twelve bottles of Peru-na I am cured." Mr. C. N. Peterson, 132 South Main St., Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes: "I cannot tell you how much good Peru-na has done me. Constantly in my store began to tell on my health, and I felt that I was gradually breaking down. I tried several remedies, but obtained no permanent relief until I took Peru-na. I felt better immediately, and five bottles restored me to complete health."

A SINCERE RECOMMENDATION.

Mr. D. C. Prosser, Brava, Allegan Co., Mich., writes: "Two years ago I was badly afflicted with catarrh of the stomach. I had a run of typhoid fever, was very dejected. I could find nothing I could eat without causing distress and sour stomach. Finally I came to the conclusion that I had catarrh of the stomach and seeing Peru-na advertised, began to take it. It helped me eat, and after taking three or four bottles I was entirely cured of stomach trouble, and can now eat anything."

Extension Work.

Members of the M. T. H. faculty have, at the solicitation of their friends, been giving courses, somewhat in the nature of university extension work, at the school this year.

Prof. Gardner has a large class of girls in wood work, while Prof. Kerrick has outlined a course in physical geography and geology. More than eighty persons have been attending these lectures and great interest is being manifested in the work.

Prof. Kerrick's schedule is as follows: October—The atmosphere, its composition, history, vapor capacity and pressure.

November—The circulation of the atmosphere, its causes and the deflection of the winds by the rotation of the earth upon its axis.

December—Cyclones and tornadoes, their causes and features.

January—The circulation in the sea and its causes and effects upon climate.

February—The crust of the earth, its depth, composition, increasing density and temperature.

March—The cause of ocean basins and continued areas.

April—The causes of mountains and the causes of mountain-forming forces.

May—The causes of earthquakes and volcanoes.

The lectures are given in the evening and the public is invited to attend.

Our Special Thanksgiving Offer

When we started in the plumbing supply business in Louisville you were unable to purchase even a washer for a faucet without paying a plumber for putting it in the faucet. The public responded at once to our method of selling direct to the consumer. Our business has been on the increase from the beginning. To-day we believe we are selling over 50 per cent. of all the plumbing material sold in Louisville, and in appreciation of this fact during Thanksgiving week we are offering the following bargains:

A Salary Law.

has a law providing that a Sheriff surrenders a prisoner at his official term exactly. Acting under that law, Alexander county, in which Cairo is located.

It is not apparent that there was lack of effort on the part of the sheriff to protect his prisoner.
He attempted to take the negro out of town, but found threatening crowds at every railroad station. He left the train and took to the woods only to find that angry men were searching the bushes and fence corners over a great expanse of territory. He found it impossible to hire a team and next to impossible to buy food. After traversing bogs and branches and plowed fields and brier patches until officer and prisoner alike were exhausted the Sheriff was overtaken by a detachment of the mob and the prisoner was seized.

In this particular instance the Sheriff seems to have exercised reasonable diligence and to have made an honest effort to protect his prisoner. That about as much as could have been expected of him. He is human and has no power to work miracles. Gov.
Clemens is said to take this view of the case and may reap the benefit of his summary removal from office.

The Illinois law is a good one. That may have operated unjustly in one case should not obscure the fact that it will work for good in any future case that may arise. If such a law existed in all the States where lynchings occur from time to time it would have a powerful influence toward diminishing their number.

Joseph G. Cannon's Monologues.

As a vaudeville feature of American politics Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois, upon the raging stump, is highly satir-
cal. In a speech at Chicago, Mr.
Cannon declared that "what Champ
Clark does not know about at Valore duty, schedules and parliamentary law would fill a book." He also said that there were "carloads of information placed before Congress during the last extra session, bearing upon the legislation in hand, but that 'information cannot be put in a man's skull without industry on his part.'"

Never, in the history of protectionism, has any one man known all about all of the schedules. Special knowledge of the various schedules is found chiefly among the beneficiaries. Neither Mr. Cannon nor Mr. Aldrich could draft such a measure as the Payne law without aid from the corporations dealing in the commodities affected. Mr. Cannon is doubtless an unfamiliar with the actual workings of many schedules as he is with the laws governing the heavyweight bodies. The history of high tariff systems is that there is developed a tangled mass of legislation representing the enterprise of grafters combined with the acquiescence of legislators. Ignorance of the legislation they enact is comprehensive as to details, but the lawmakers find it a simple matter to adopt suggestions of the experts representing competition and a guarantee of the privilege of establishing artificial prices. Carloads of information are of very little value where major carloads of lobbyists write the laws. It is unnecessary for such information to be digested by the Senate Committee on Finance or the House Ways and Means Committee, and it is quite useless for it to be assimilated by "insurgents."

A simple revenue tariff is not difficult to understand, but whenever the system of separating the "ultimate consumer" from his cash for the benefit of the privileged class is established the legal machinery becomes too complicated to be understood as a whole by legislators.

It is not necessary to master carloads of information as to the details of the tariff system to know that theft is immoral, and that the laws "guaranteeing a reasonable profit" paid by consumers who have no guarantee of reasonable prices, is theft.

Mr. Cannon's monologues always contribute to the gaiety of his audiences and of newspaper readers, but he rarely says anything that could impress any body of persons more given to serious thought than the average vaudeville audience.

Lord Morley's Reform Scheme.

It is announced from Simla that the so-called "Lord Morley Reform Scheme" takes effect this month. This is a plan for the reform of the British administration in India, outlined by Lord Morley, Secretary of State for India, in the House of Lords last December, and designed to give India a sort of embryonic constitutional government. The share of the natives in the Indian Government has been a small one up to the present time, even upon paper, and smaller in fact.

The Morley Reform Scheme represents to the Indian agitator, who is,
for the most part, the Bengali "Babu," educated at native colleges or English universities, a concession made to the Indians by the British through fear.

From the British viewpoint it is the granting of justice without regard to the moral courage of a government which is not afraid to grant reforms in the face of conditions which may cause the concessions to be construed by reckless agitators and terrorists as a yielding of ground before threatening traitors and assassins. In other columns the Courier-Journal publishes today a timely and interesting article depicting conditions in the chief center of agitation and anarchy.

The situation is an interesting one.
Under the new programme all religions
may elect representatives to the Viceroys' Council and the Provincial Councils, but, because of the anarchistic outbreaks, a safeguard is provided in a clause which grants the imperial and provisional governments authority to declare ineligible persons whose participation in deliberations is considered contrary to public interest.

This wide margin of discretionary power in the formation of the councils will assuredly be a peg upon which agitators can hang the arguments that the reform is chimerical. Inasmuch as the anarchists have not been mollified by the news of the inauguration of the reform, which has been current in India for a year, the outlook is that when the new form of government begins its operations anarchy will continue.

The Government machinery will be increased in dimensions under the new programme. The Viceroy's Council will number 370 members, instead of 124, as formerly. Of these 125 will be elected by natives, as against thirty-nine elected under the passing form of government. The functions of the council will be enlarged to allow it to take an active part in the making of the budget and in all legislation.

The new Indian councils will meet in January. Doubtless there will be put forward for election a number of the alleged leaders of anarchy, whom the machinery of the law has been powerless to convict, and some of whom were deported and then allowed to return because of the ill-effect that resulted, both in India and in England, against the deportation without trial. These will, of course, be excluded under the clause relating to persons whose participation would be contrary to public interest. The probability is that the new councils will begin their sittings with the public mind considerably inflamed in the chief centers of anti-British agitation. Fireworks may be expected when the native voice is lifted up in the councils against the overtaxa-tion of the Indians to defray the expenses of a military force, employed, as the natives contend, to maintain the strategic "scientific frontier" rather than to maintain peace in the peninsula.

Kier Hardy has described the Government of India as "a military despotism tempered by a civil bureaucracy." In most countries, he declares, "something of a gulf separates the Government from the governed; but in India the gulf becomes an unbridged chasm." If the figure of speech is not particularly
a good one, it at least shows the attitude of the British Labor Party. Indian politicians are even more violently opposed to the British Raj, and the form of government he grants to millions of brown subjects. The Indian budget is discussed in Parliament one day in each session. The British protector against the "military despotism tempered by a civil bureaucracy" will have his fling along with the Indian politician and lend encouragement to native agitation.

No matter whether or not the underlying cause of the extreme poverty in India is maladministration by an alien race, the conditions in that country, as compared with almost any country in the East or the West, are such as to be peculiarly adapted to the needs of the agitator who would convince his audience that injustice is the cause of the situation.

It is estimated that twenty-six millions a year is the average income of the Indian peasants, and they constitute 85 per cent. of the enormous population. The figures seem almost incredible in America, and the poverty endured in India is exceptional in Asia, as well as unknown in Europe.
One meal a day is declared to be the rule with the Indian "ryot," and that a spare meal rather than a "square"

one. Yet the land revenue has increased from 225,000,000 rupees to 304-600,000 rupees within the last twenty years.

"Militarism" in India means the expenditure of about $100,000,000 a year in maintaining an army to guard a northern frontier and overawe southern unrest. Even if it be true, as is contended by pro-British publicists, that India was cursed with poverty greater under native rule and overrun by despotism; even if it be true that the unrest manifests itself not among the "ryots," who are overtaxed and half starved, but among the "babus," who are overeducated and half-Westernized, this does not affect the fact that the skilled agitator has at hand excellent material for painting grim pictures of oppression.

At the bottom of the Indian "unrest"
lies the "color line," and the anti-European sentiment which resents the proprietaryship of a numerically weak white nation over a numerically strong Asiatic people. Despite the fact that Indian princes visiting Europe are the objects of social attention, the line is almost as sharply drawn by Anglo-Indians
as it is between Americans and Afro-Americans. A distinguished English traveler in British India said recently, "I could fill a volume with cases where the reader would find it hard to believe, illustrating the way in which the color line is drawn." The effect is reflected in the recent cry of an Indian pamphleteer that "war between the races will exist as long as the English and Hindoo races exist, if the present unnatural relation does not cease." But purely governmental questions will furnish the native members of the Indian councils with so much ammunition that the prospects for the success of the Morley Reform Scheme as a cure for agitation and anarchy seem remote.

Who Will Marry Amanda?

A fruitful topic of discussion—if words are to be regarded as fruit; and a barren one if measured by results—is the question of why many educated women do not marry.

An explanation made by a Kentucky writer, some twenty years ago, was that the average man regards the highly educated woman as he would a brilliant insect which might, or might not, have a sting, and which it is wise to avoid.

A new contributor to the sum of discussion is Amanda Saepa Quasita, who makes a few remarks in the New York Independent. Unlike another contributor to the same publication, who lamented, or at least commented upon,
the fact that he had never been sought
in marriage, although conscious of no reason why, this student of the marriage problem says that "through the accidents of propinquity" she has received several proposals from eligible men.

From this inevitable spinster's explanations of the failure of a half-dozen American suitors to measure up to the mark we quote:

"I have often found men more compensation than women, intellectually.
But one does not marry for the sake of intellectual discussion. And as a sufferer from the Americans of my acquaintance are failures. They propose, which is the main thing, but with no romance or charm.
I have only plainness of face and meanness of stature. . . . The main difficulty was that in every possible respect I was their superior. . . . This they said themselves and they were quite right. I was not accomplished, more versatile. Their enjoyment of my company consisted largely in sitting back to listen to my words, with a fascination unmixed with terror. . . . Uneducated women admire these men, because to them they seem remarkable."

But let Frenchmen, Germans, Englishmen, Swedes, Poles, Norwegians, Russians, Italians, Portuguese, Spaniards, Hungarians and men of other nations cheer up. There is a chance for some one to win this maiden of high education and high ideals. As the poet has put it:

"She is a woman, therefore may be won."
For, says Miss Amanda Saepa Quasita—the name, of course, being merely a nom de plume—American men only are the subjects of her scathing criticism. Europeans are all right. The only detail in which they fail, so far as it concerns her, is that they have not looked upon the matter with the same loveliness of Amanda and fallen at her Trilbyesque feet to sue for the great good fortune of hearing her talk about her education and her travels for the rest of their natural lives and be fascinated, and perhaps terrified, by her insights she stripped at in "furnin parts." But for the fact that such foreigners as she has had the experience of admiring have not popped the question in rhyme, blank verse or oratorical prose, they suit Amanda from the ground up. Man-saves in America—is an imperial animal, worthy of capture.

To quote again:

"Every woman who has lived in Europe feels the striking difference between the two types of masculinity. The American man may seem more moral perhaps, more wholesome, but undeniably more dull."

Here we pause to observe that, like the author of "Three Weeks," the adorable, traveled and accomplished Amanda seems to object to American men on the ground that they are more inclined to take walks with her than liberties, and, like Mrs. Glyn, she does not seem to understand that taste, rather than thinility, often settles the course of the roving and untutored male in such cases.

"The Frenchman, the Italian, the Austrian, and while their proposals are more infrequent, without a knowing of the bank book, as entertainers
they could make an American man open his eyes. They do not like black and smoke. They find a chair for a woman, play Chopin to her, invite her to tea in the charming corners, plan moonlight walks and sunset rides. . . . They make the American seem like a dull, awkward boy.
They play, sing, paint and keep abreast of literature. They are continually on a level with women."

With steady nerves and a feeling of sureness that compels admiration, Amanda Saepa Quasita Erst Demon-strandum, winds up with this meaty paragraph of helpful hints:

If the good-hearted, companionable,
longest American man would wake up,
use his wits, straighten his necktie, improve his manners, become informed on things in general, try seriously not to marry, but to make himself marriageable, and, above all, get over his terrified admiration of the blunderer sex, cultivate his capacity to contradict her, and even bully her now and then—he would get what he wanted in wives as he has done
in every other department of life.

"Meanwhile, the woman who has taken her education more seriously will like him, will play with him and will work with him, but she has too much romance left in her to marry where she cannot with respect, or to substitute for love liking not unmingled with contempt."

The advice which tall-ends the article is not exactly germane to the subject under discussion, which is not "How Can American Men Achieve Matrimony," but "Why College Women Do Not Marry." As a matter of fact American men find it a reasonably simple matter to marry. Generally speaking, and leaving out of consideration a small class of the idle rich in a few of the largest centers of population, they marry and live happily despite the expansion of their living expenses. And they "get what they want in wives," to borrow the phrases of the fair dis-parager of the American as a lover.
They may sometimes find it impossible to marry an Amanda, but after all it is best that they should not. What would it profit a man if he should successfully storm the citadel of Amanda's affections, and for one brief and glorious moment feel himself to be an Antony playing opposite Cleopatra, only to go through life being made to feel like an anthropoid ape at an endless session of the Culture Club of Keokuk?

The question is, therefore, not what American men must do to their neckties, and how they must burnish their brass and acquire interestingly bad morals, in order to win wives. The question is, who in the world is to be depended upon to inspire Amanda with admiration and propose to her without first learning whether he is to be supported happily in idleness afterward as a reward for having played Chopin, and cooped her beta upon her superiority as a talker upon travel?

Cast a careful eye over the situation; there is no happy prospect discoverable. In order to buy bun-buns and automobiles, and furbelows and trips to Europe for his prospective wife the average American man must continue to make boilers and bricks instead of bon mots; must continue to eat meats and vegetables instead of playing Chopin; must continue to fish in the stock market for the wherewithal that is the sesame to marriage; happiness, instead of helping to make tea in charming corners and plying the ingratiating arts of the green goods vender while striving to ac-certain how much hard American cash
the fair American could afford to give for a highly-polished husband.

A truly melancholy factor in the marriage problem of the women of Amanda's degree of superiority to the American man is that there are few women of her type who are rich enough to lay down the necessary quantity of pounds to buy a proposal from the only type of man who is pleasing. Of course, there are college-bred women who are wealthy, but as a rule they are the daughters of wealthy parents who have gone through college as a matter of course, and who do not take their education seriously; who have traveled abroad, but do not feel entitled to the spotlight upon the stage of life ever afterward because they have sojourned in pensions in Paris or looked the Sphinx squarely in the face under the escort of Thomas Cook and Sons.
There's a difference between the educated individual and the insufferable person who corners a victim to repeat the Psalm of Life or the Burial of Sir John Moore to display his familiarity with the classics; a difference between the traveled person and the terrifying product of a personally conducted excursion who goes to and fro making a noise like a graphophone which has had the works of the estimable and instructive Mr. Badeker fed into its cylinders;
a difference between the person who is merely superior and the person who is obsessed by the conviction that everyone else is inferior; a difference between the intellectual person and the "intellectual snob."

It has been well said that every American boy should go to college and study diligently for four years, and then go somewhere for four years and strive diligently to forget that he has a college education. The same advice may be given to some American girls.
A mere textbook education is not the sum of knowledge. Those who make the mistake of considering it so bore others and render themselves unhappy.

There are advanced many different arguments as to why college women do not marry. Unquestionably one of the reasons why a certain type of college woman—happily a rare type—does not is that she is so keenly aware of her superiority that she is "more fastidious than desirable." There were more of this type when the higher education of women was rarer than it is to-day.
Nowadays many girls go through college without alighting their studies,
and yet without becoming blue stockings. As there are more young men than young girls getting college educations in America, it cannot be true that the college-bred woman finds no mate
because there are no educated men.
And it is by no means true that the average college-bred American woman prefers any sort of a foreigner to the home-grown husband. The thoroughly educated American woman, especially the woman who has been an intelligent observer abroad, has the contrary view.

The reasons why the Amanda type—as revealed in print—does not marry is plain—but those reasons shed little light upon the whole problem.

The question of who is to marry
Amanda is beyond solution.

Juries and the Popular Will.

Gov. Brown, of Georgia, in refusing an application for the pardon of a man convicted of murder expresses the opinion that the "will of the people as expressed in the jury box should be obeyed."

The verdicts of juries are not always expression of the will of the people. In the case wherein Gov. Brown is quoted he probably knows whereof he speaks.
It certainly is the will of the people that men who are guilty of murder should be punished. It is right that a Governor should be chary of using the pardoning power where a defendant has been convicted after a fair trial. It is no simple matter to secure convictions in criminal prosecutions, even where there is no reasonable doubt, of guilt, provided the defendant has means or influences. "Quick justice" is for the criminal who is without money or friends. We seldom see an instance of it where the accused is able to secure the services of able counsel.

Juries represent the people and when properly selected they are fairly representative. At best they are more likely to err on the side of mercy than the side of justice. In all courts verdicts are returned which do not meet the popular approval. The verdict of a jury is as uncertain as a horse race. A juror may cause a mistrial and then attribute the result to the "eleven stubborn men" who made up the remainder of the panel.

In a case like the one in Georgia,
where the defendant has been convicted by a jury, and where the case has been appealed, the high court finding no error, it is a safe proposition to assume that the will of the people was expressed in the jury box. There are other cases, however, and a mighty lot too many of them, where it cannot truthfully be said that the will of the people has been expressed.

Beauty and Utility.

In an address before the Illinois
Outdoor Improvement Association at Bloomington Jens Jensen, consulting landscape architect of the west park system of Chicago, discussed the lakes-to-the-gulf waterway from the landscape gardener's standpoint. Mr.
Jensen would have the waterway beautiful. He thinks the proposed straight lines of the canal should be modified,
the excavated material should be utilized and removed, the banks should be beautiful and the bridges should be artistic.

Mr. Jensen says there is no reason why the waterway should not be of great importance commercially and at the same time of great service to the public at large. Going into some details as to what he would do if he had the building of the canal he says:

"Along the banks of the waterway there should be ornamental groves to relieve the monotony of the canal.
Vegetation should be supplied like that furnished by nature along river courses.
Trees promoting the interests of beauty, recreation and health should be planted
here and there along the banks of the canal. . . . This canal some day will be a highway for the pleasure-seeking public.
Starved Rock lies upon its course, and in time other such parks should be established in the Illinois Valley. It is a beautiful valley and presents many opportunities of the kind."

No more convenient route for a State highway, coming from Chicago downward through the State, could be found than along the banks of the canal and nowhere could the right of way be more readily provided, for it already would be used for the waterway. This would become a great benefit to the Commonwealth.
Travel between Chicago and St. Louis and the important cities of the State would choose this high road, and the benefit to the State would be incalcu-lated. These should be designed in an artistic way. It costs no more to make a bridge beautiful than to make it functional and sturdy always is a good investment. Only beautiful things have withstood the ravages of time."

Mr. Jensen's ideas are good, but the advocates of the deep waterway are looking at the proposition with more regard for its utility than for its beauty. The State of Illinois, which is putting up the money for an extension of the Chicago drainage canal, probably will not be impressed with the plan to modify the straight line.
A crooked canal might look better to the trained eye of the landscape gardener, but it would cost more money, and Illinois is not likely to depart from present plans. A straight canal would mean greater facility for commerce and it is for business reasons and not for picturesque effects that the waterway is to be constructed. Whatever is lacking in picturesque quality will be furnished by the Mississippi River.

The idea of supplying vegetation is rather more practical, and the suggestion of a canal boulevard is worth considering. If beautiful bridges last longer than ugly ones the average waterway advocate will vote for beautiful bridges on general principles. The main thing, though, is to build a canal for the people now on earth. The problem of beautification is one that may well be left to nature and to posterity.

Mr. Fairbanks, of Indiana, is reported to be "laying for" Mr. Beveridge with a meat ax. Carefully reviewing the modern history of Indiana we don't recall a time when the two gentlemen lost sleep overing up prayers for each other's political success.

Mr. Phil Snowden, of England, who says that the suffragette movement is "deep-seated and subterranean," confirms a suspicion that where it chiefly flourishes it fulfills the Shermanian definition of war.

The German naval budget may make

WOMAN SUFFRAGE IS SURE TO COME, DE- CLARES JUSTICE BREWER OF SUPREME COURT

Not Fully At Once, But By Varying Steps—History of the Movement.

(By Justice David J. Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court.)

THE question of female suffrage, like the riot of Banquo, will not down, to some it is only a shade from the ether world; while to others it is as one of the white-robed celestial beings who appeared to Peter,
James and John on the mountain top.

Turning from the supernatural to the real, it is now a pressing, practical question. It has passed beyond the days of ridicule, and we hear of it in the international disputes by arbitration, and against the resort to the sword or the bullet. Indeed, with universal female suffrage comes, it may be affirmed that the trouble will be seen only with women and known only in history as the sweet song of the angels about the manger at Bethlehem will become the universal song of humanity.

But putting all the arguments pro and con, whether whatever may be the actual right, the real question is a practical one. How does woman's suffrage work when tried? In this nation four States, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and Idaho, at least three of them it has been in existence long enough for substantial results to be obtained. In each of these States the conditions are different, and yet, yet it failed of success. The concurrent evidence, admitted to the satisfaction of the public, is that the suffrage of women is not always of immediate application.

A Matter of Doubt.

By the late amendments to the National Constitution the franchise was made citizens and given the right of suffrage, yet it has always been a question whether the latter shall be promptly granted to women or whether it shall be brought under our control. Full suffrage was not granted to them, and the franchise still remains for future consideration. It is not yet known whether or not, or if not now, how soon, it will be granted to women. It is not yet

SECTION 2

INSISTENCE UPON IMMERSION AS THE ONLY FORM OF BAPTISM A BAR TO CHRISTIAN UNITY

Leaders At Baptist Congress, Just Closed, Advocate a Broader View in the Future.

Papers and discussions at the Baptist congress, just held, disclosed a Baptist public opinion at the North at any rate, that is much unlike the popular impression of the Baptist position. It is true that at the congress there were Baptists of the old way, but nothing could be clearer than that the radical sentiments expressed at the congress were those held by the large majority of those in attendance. And this particular congress was well attended by representative Baptists from almost every principal city of the North and East. With some men present from the West. The sentiments that carried weight had three phases, and all of them seemed to have the congress with them. These were that insistence upon immersion as the only form of baptism is a bar to Christian unity that must be gotten rid of in the interest of such unity; that insistence upon such form is comparable to insistence upon any other form, and therefore a type of ritualism; and that insistence takes away that independence for which Baptist fathers stood pre-eminent.

One well-known Baptist pastor, head of one of the largest congregations in New England, had promised to attend the congress and speak. He had prepared his paper. At the last moment he decided it to be unwise to proclaim his views at this congress, and he refused to attend. He stated that he did not give way in any particular in his views. It was only on the wisdom of setting them forth.

The speaker who took his place said the minister in question need have no fear that scores of others took quite as advanced ground as he. Then the speaker proceeded to go so far as to leave nothing whatever of the distinctive Baptist position, and stand on a certain ground. The speaker said he intended to leave nothing of it.

That he carried the congress with him was quite apparent. He added that Christians outside of the denomination considered that Baptists stand for a particular form of baptism, and that this is a logical consequence, and a refusal to receive members by letter from other bodies, unless and until such members have been immersed. He declared that Baptists stand for these things, and said that hard work must be done to disabuse the public mind. He was warmly applauded by the congress.

The arguments that seemed to receive the assent of the congress were that Baptists must not stand in the way of Christian unity, and that they held to nothing that need stand in the way. There was some assent to a statement that there must be liberty in the Baptist denomination to the extent that men and women might select such way as they chose to be baptized.

When asked if there remains anything distinctive for which Baptists stand, or used stand in future, speakers at the Congress declared that Baptists are not so weak as to stand on nothing but technicalities, for if they were they had long ago done well to disband. The Baptist congress of 1909 accurately expressed sentiments obtaining in the Baptist denomination there has been tremendous change in the past few years. There has been such change was many times affirmed by writers and speakers at the congress in question.

Methodists Going Ahead.
Methodists have now held all of their annual financial meetings and their conference for planning the work of the year, including the visitations by their bishops. They have recently been going through a financial strain, incident to hard times, and for the first time this year in several annual conferences see immediate improvement. Some dwindling caused them, two or three years ago, to consider whether to curtail work or go into debt.

The latter policy was adopted and Methodists in the churches have improved the action. The work of Methodists in which there is the largest amount of popular interest is that of the Home Board, the Foreign Board and the Freedmen's Aid. The first named had receipts last year of $338,325,000, which was nearly $400,000 larger than the previous year. Expenditures on the field went just beyond the $1,000,000 mark. There was, however, $50,000 available to apply on the old debt, and so the present debt of the board, incurred during the recent depression, is $137,700.

The Foreign Board had receipts last year of $1,342,000, which was a falling off of about $150,000 from the year before. The expenditures on the field amounted to $1,417,000, so that the debt of the board was increased a little from the previous year. It now stands at $168,000. The Freedmen's Aid fund in debt more heavily in proportion than any of the other boards, at one time its showing on the wrong side being $200,000. It has now been reduced to $50,000, its receipts last year having been $15,000 more than the previous year.

Methodist work for the negro consists, in part, of twenty-three schools scattered through twelve States of the South. They are worth at least $2,000,000, and there are 10,000 pupils. There was made a slight reduction this year in amount of appropriations, but this was done under the rule of the General Conference forbidding appropriations for the year immediately ahead being any larger than the receipts for the year then ending. But members of the board declared that there is to be no falling off.

It is therefore denied by Methodists charged with the missionary management of their churches that there will be any lack of support for their work in the mission fields during the year just ahead. Especially are Methodist men aroused. It is said, for the success of the women in management of their affairs and in raising money has been pointed out to them, and it has been seen by them what careful management and wise distribution of effort will accomplish. Methodist women were little affected by hard times. The entire Methodist missionary debt stands now at $403,000 on an annual expenditure reaching well up toward $2,500,000.

American Carries Off Honors.
It was the Rt. Rev. Dr. G. Mershon Williams, whose jurisdiction in the mining region of North Michigan, who carried off the honors at the recent conference in Upsala, Sweden, between representatives of the established Churches of England and Sweden. Bishop Williams was a New York State farmer boy in his younger days, who went to Cornell University and later to Hobart College. After serving in Detroit and Milwaukee he was sent to Northern Michigan as a missionary. So well did he do among the miners that he was later made bishop of a jurisdiction set off and called Marquette.

Last year the Archbishop of Canterbury named a commission to go to Upsala, in response to an invitation from the Archbishop of Upsala, and make over better relations between the two communions. Appreciating how great is the regard of Sweden and Germany for higher learning, the English archbishop selected the Bishop of Salisbury to head the English part of the commission. It was to go to the great university town of Sweden. The Bishop of Salisbury thought it would be well, seeing there are so many Swedes in America, to have an American member of the commission. He had heard that Bishop Williams knew something about Sweden, and so, assuring himself and the English archbishop that the American was to hold a minor place, he dispatched the invitation to Marquette.

The commission has just concluded its sittings in Upsala, where its deliberations attracted wide attention in Swedish and German papers. The influence of the Germans was so great that, acting through their Foreign Office, they induced the Swedish bishops to have nothing to do with the meeting, save only two of them. Germany diplomacy did not want English church diplomacy to get any more advantage than it could help.

The personal triumph of the American bishop was, according to all accounts, complete. And it was won on down-right merit. Very early in the deliberations the English members of the commission were floored by the technical points relating to Swedish religious history. They took a back seat. The only one left was the American, and he seems to have been more than able to hold his own.

Speaking the Swedish language perfectly he soon had the Swedish members of the commission all attention over his wonderful and intimate knowledge of their affairs. It seems he had spent many months searching Swedish archives and going over things that the Swedes themselves had not secured. Introduced and honored by the King and the Crown Prince, the American bishop was able to tell to the stories of the Thirty Years War; of the Reformation, of which they had never heard. So marked was his triumph that it is said, that he became quite the leading figure of the commission, overshadowing the Swedish members.

In scholastic matters, at one of the ancient seats of learning, the American easily carried away high credit for scholarship.

This conference over Swedish orders has a practical bearing for America. There are here from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 Swedes. While in Sweden practically all belong to the State Church, coming to America many fall away, partly from changed conditions, but partly from requirements here. These requirements include evangelical conversion and prohibition of masonry and other secret societies. The result is that only about 300,000 Swedes belong to Protestant bodies, Lutheran, Methodist, Baptist and all. The effort is to create a condition that will get and hold this vast number of lapsed members.

Various expedients were considered at Upsala, but there was lack of authority to treat and change, and so nothing beyond an agreement to give further study to the matter was accomplished. There is some talk, it is said, of consecrating a Swedish ecclesiastic for America, and sending him here to negotiate, but it is said that Swedish Lutherans in America may resent it as an intrusion and dictate. Hundreds of thousands of men and women, and they of the highest Northern Europe type, are involved. It is said, however, one of the most difficult tasks in the world to deal with, this one of religious prejudice and preference.

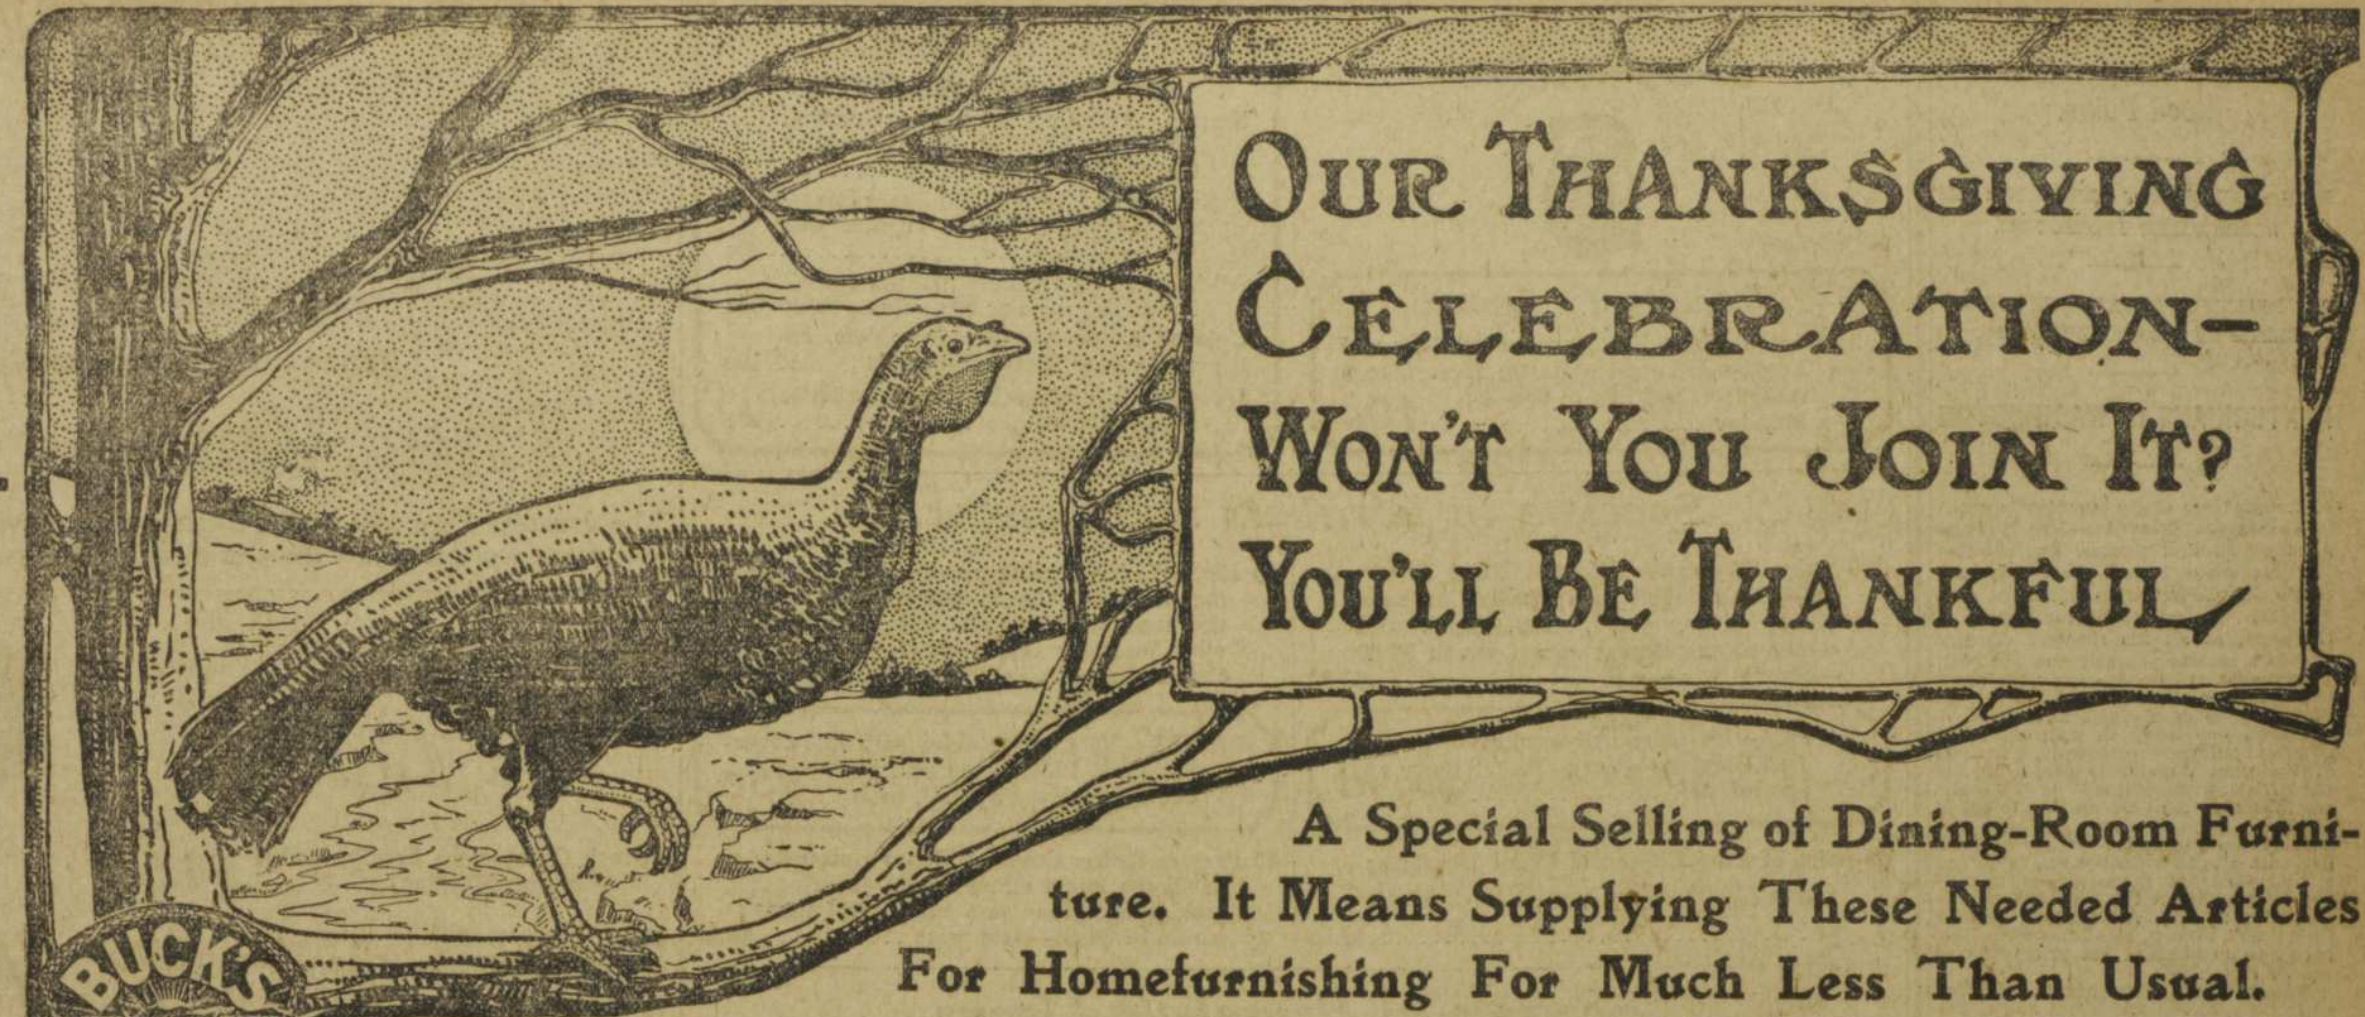

Suffragan Bishops.
Recent action of local Protestant Episcopal bodies makes it certain that the Episcopal General Convention of next year to pass the law permitting suffragan bishops. The action just taken by the convention of the diocese of New York will go a long way, it is said, in favor of the measure and its dual passage. For years the Episcopal Church in this country against the English expedient. Especially has objection come from bishops, who have cried out against two kinds of bishops.

When the problem of what to do with the negro was up, a suffragan bishop seemed the only thing to offer him. So it was offered, and the last General Convention put the measure on its passage, the colored man to be the beneficiary. Now it is found that some large cities, opposed to a coadjutor, favor suffragans and so petition for the passage of the new law. The change will be an important one, for it will introduce into the Episcopal Church another type of bishops, at least insofar as jurisdiction goes.

The demand for such new type, apart from helping the negro, comes from the large cities. Objection to a division of territory is almost unanimous, and yet the cities have, in several instances, grown so large that one bishop cannot do the work. Hence assistants who are not his equals in jurisdiction, although they are bishops in every other sense, who can help perform the work, but under one responsible head. The occasion for providing such for the negro Episcopal parishes was that these parishes demand a bishop of their own race. There could not be two dioceses covering the same territory, and there exists now no authority for electing a bishop who shall not under the death of the diocesan, succeed to his place. Hence the creation of one who does not succeed to do so.

Influence is also to be brought to bear upon the General Convention of next year to induce it to incorporate into the official Board of Missions of the Episcopal Church the Social Service work now done by the commissions of that name. This is following the lead of the Presbyterian General Assembly, through the influence of which the Episcopal Church has been able to do so much work.

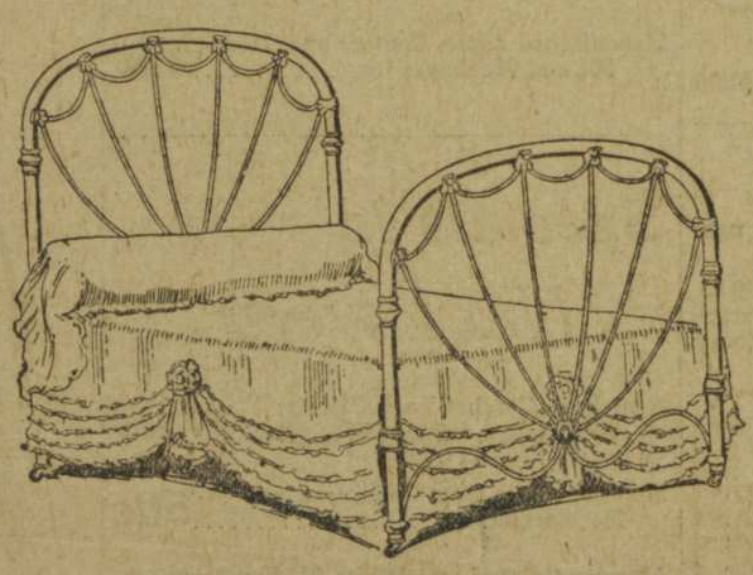

The man who started the movement to broaden the social work was Mayor Sague of Poughkeepsie, a Democratic party leader of New York, who was also a staunch and active Episcopal worker and giver. He declared it to be of the consequence "whether the men who do the work button his collar front or back. The thing the Episcopal Church has need to do is to get hold of the man who don't wear any collar." And he said that the Episcopal Church is laboring class into the hands of the official missionary society of the church is an effort to carry into effect this sentiment, and one that is growing in the church named, it is said.

The law passed two years ago, relating to the admission of ministers of other bodies into Episcopal pulpits on special occasions, the bishop giving his permission, will be remembered as having created a good deal of discussion immediately following its passage. In several dioceses lately the High Church people have endeavored to make a show of hands. In the recent New York Convention they sent out tickets in advance, bearing names of certain men, and omitting that of Mr. Francis Lynde Steierson of that city, who was the author of the law in question. There was no open contest, but everybody in the convention understood the meaning of the move. It came to naught, however, the deputy attacked being re-elected. Similarly, in other conventions thus far held the opponents of the measure, who will make a determined effort to have the law repealed, have accomplished nothing whatever.

The efforts to raise money for a Boston Y. M. C. A. building, and the appeal to Unitarians to contribute, has raised an issue that has been taken up by Unitarians throughout the country. The issue was that Unitarians desire to contribute to Y. M. C. A. causes but desire the associations to take out of their teachings the orthodox conception of Jesus Christ. Of course no decision has been made, but there is much discussion of the Unitarian plea, both by themselves and by others.

One outcome of the conference of the Middle States, just held by Unitarians, is a demand that the conference undertake larger missionary endeavors in its own field, which includes Canada as well as the Middle States. The American Unitarian Association is the national body, charged with missionary and educational work, but the Middle States people feel that they ought to raise more money and expend more in extension work co-ordinating with the association, of course.

The most hopeful section of the country, in and near Pittsburgh. One of the most dramatic cities in its growth and changes, Unitarians say its people have long given liberal religious ideas a cordial hearing. A group of Unitarians is building in the north part of the city, and the extension work has reached Homestead, and even Wheeling and Morgantown in West Virginia. New York and its vicinity also are being developed with one new congregation at White Plains. The general agents of the Unitarian organizations are more hopeful and more active than for some years.

WORTH SOME RISK.
(Indianapolis News.)
Mr. Cleveland used to tell a story of an old colored man who risked his life when out fishing, to save a small boy of his own race. He was asked whether this was his own.
"Oh, no, sah, he not my son."
"Well, he be some relative, that you risked your life for him?"
"No, sah; he no relative; no, sah."
"Then why did you plunge in, in that place, and fetch him out?"
"Well, sah, the fact is, sah, them white boys, and the bait!"

FIRST-NIGHTER.

Mrs. Taft Samples Most All Good Plays.

HER PHYSICAL CONDITION IS SOMEWHAT IMPROVED.

A DISTINGUISHED TRIUMPH-RATE OF HEAVYWEIGHTS.

KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON

(Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.)
Washington, Nov. 20.—Mrs. Taft is a confirmed first-nighter. She samples the premier of almost every play that comes along. First night audiences, consequently, are apt to be the largest of the week, at all the theaters. There's always a chance you see, and not such a long shot either of seeing the show and seeing the President's wife, too, all for the price of a single admission.

There's one thing in which most of us are unanimous—personally, I am one of the most unanimous people in the world "along those lines" as the country preachers say—we all like to get a whole lot for our money. Where the Presidential people go, the crowd goes, if it can. The Presidential box is on the left-hand side of the stage—bottom of the column. When the President's folks come in, if they are spotted, which they aren't always, the audience arises, partly to do homage, but principally to rubber legs.

Now that the President has returned to his own bed and board and to the personal care of his devoted wife, Mrs. Taft's sister, Mrs. Lewis Moore, who has taken the tenderest charge of the distinguished invalid during the long absence, has been relieved from duty. Mrs. Moore left at once for her home in Cincinnati, where her venerable father, Mr. Heron, is in a critical state of health.

Mrs. Moore expects to return to Washington after Christmas to be an understudy for Mrs. Taft, to a great extent, throughout the exactions of the official season.

President's Wife Looking Well.

The Presidential consort, although still far from her former vigorous self, and eschewing all social contacts, or any effort that would be a strain on her depleted nerve forces, is looking remarkably well and handsome this autumn. She has a lot of stunning new clothes. At a premiere at the Belasco, she was a picture in a frock of pale blue satin, with big white hat wreathed in pink roses. At the Boston symphony concert, where she sat entranced—Mrs. Taft is a masterly musician herself and no treat of melody ever escapes her—she wore green broadcloth, with long, graceful black velvet cloak and large, plumy, black hat. At the National Theater this week the President's wife was exquisitely arrayed in pearl gray messaline, and hat of the same tint, swept by a pearl gray feather. Another new costume in which she has appeared, is an adroit combination of ecru net and pale blue, the sleeves and corsage being of the net striped with the blue. No woman with her sartorial sense, so keenly alive, can be seriously ill. Mrs. Taft has recently made a shopping expedition to New York and laid in an extra supply of pretty things for herself and Miss Helen. Miss Taft, however, cares little for the pomp and frivolities of this mundane sphere.

Goes To Church On Foot.

While Mrs. Taft excludes herself from society, the better to husband her resources for the tax that begins with the first of the year, denying herself even to friends, she might almost claim to be intimate, she has resumed gentle recreations with all her former zest. No Sunday since her return has seen the devoted lady absent from her pew in old St. John's—the same pew, well up to the front, near the chancel, that was occupied by Mrs. Roosevelt during her royal regime. When Mr. Taft was Secretary of War, his family held a pew in what is known as "army row" in St. John's, a little in the rear of their present august sitting. Like Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Taft goes to church usually on foot. She has only to cross Lafayette Park.

At secular affairs, Mr. Frederick W. Carpenter, secretary to the President, is almost invariably in attendance, and Capt. Archibald Butt, at the Columbia Theater the other night Mrs. Taft was gloriously pretty in a white and pink flowery chiffon, made in a sort of Louis Quinze effect, with a hat of gold tulle trimmed with white algrette and pink roses.

The band concert at Potomac driveway received fresh impetus this autumn, with Mrs. Taft on the scene once or twice. However, she did not hold court in her carriage in the one sacred spot reserved for the royal equipage, as when she assumed the diversion in the springtime, and made the remote spot the resort of the fashionable. Her automobile was kept in motion.

Enjoys Chrysanthemum Show.

Mrs. Taft and her sister enjoyed the recent chrysanthemum show at the propagating gardens and the general annual flower show given by the Washington Florist Company, at which latter a newly-bred rose and a prize-winner—a pale pink beauty, was christened "Mrs. Taft." The lady has a chrysanthemum namesake as well.

The President insists that his wife shall continue her regimen of rest for some time to come. He looks after his "Nelly" most solicitously. The Chief of the nation sent a congratulatory note to his wife every single day of his recent circumnavigating absence. How many of the rest of our misanthropic could boast such an exemption from conjugal neglect?

Mrs. Taft's Potomac driveway concert has closed for the season with a flourish of trumpets. All the gilded gauds were on parade at the final affair with the exception of the sovereign lady herself who was not in evidence. One of the most dashing young women present, who has seldom missed a driveway reunion, was Miss Katherine Jennings, one of the handsomest girls in Washington, daughter of Mr. Hennen Jennings, formerly of New Orleans, considered one of the Monte Cristo of the South African diamond fields.

Three Great Men.

Magnificently speaking, there are certainly three great men in Washington. They are in other ways as well. This distinguished triumvirate of heavyweights are of course the President first, Dr. Harvey W. Hiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, the pure food expert of the world, and Col. Robert E. Lee, son and namesake of the great Confederate leader, whose technical home is in Virginia, but who is as familiar to Washingtonians as the Capitol itself. These distinguished gentlemen are all men of great personal magnetism. They have the cheerful natures, that are usually associated with height.

At a reception the other night at which Col. Robert E. Lee was the center of attraction—he has a load of tradition to keep up, and his ample shoulders are equal to it, a group of women stood at a little distance and eyed the worthy son of a distinguished sire with curiosity.

"Quite six feet in height, isn't he?" queried one, "and weighs about 350?"

"I used to know his dimensions," another of the group returned, unsmilingly, as though the gentleman were a steamboat or a Union Station, "but they have slipped my memory."

The ample and scholarly Dr. Wiley, of Indiana, of bygone days, died some years ago, but his memory is so fresh in the minds of those who knew him, that it is clean, is a connoisseur, however, in many culinary delights. A Smithfield ham prepared under Dr. Wiley's auspices, is a bonne bouche for the gods. He holds this delectable viand in order, with many a mysterious touch to augment its exquisite palatableness.

Kentucky Minister's Charge.

The Rev. J. M. Forbes Taylor, of Stanford, Ky., has been recently called to the pastorate of the Centennial Baptist church in Washington, much to the gratification of the congregation. Mr. Taylor is regarded as one of the notably bright and rising young men in the Baptist ministry. He was educated in Georgetown, Ky., and at the Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville. Before assuming the pastorate at Corinth, Mr. Taylor held charges at both Corinth and South Elkhorn.

His brother, J. A. Taylor, also a graduate of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, has a church in Shelbyville, Tenn.

Kehoe, of Washington and Kentucky, have returned from their bridal trip and have taken up their residence at the Kalamazoo. Mr. Kehoe's bridegroom, who is a handsome young man, is the son of a prominent business house in the heart of Washington.

Notes of Kentuckians.

Mrs. Frances Kellough has leased her handsome residence at 1819 I street to Senator and Mrs. Benjamin Shively, of Indiana, who will take immediate possession. Mrs. Kellough and Mrs. Andrew Y. Bradley will spend the winter in Louisville.

Mr. Hancock Robinson, of Washington, formerly of Kentucky, whose wife is Miss Fannie Scruggs, of Memphis, was a student at Sayre Institute, of Lexington, while on a hunting expedition in the mountains of Kentucky. Before returning home he will visit his relatives in Louisville.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson have recently announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Shively Robinson, to Mr. William Nowland Hilleck, a prominent young banker of Bath, N. Y. The marriage will likely not occur until next summer.

Mrs. Richardson Gibson has returned to her home in Virginia, near Alexandria and Washington, after a visit in Lexington to her mother, Mrs. Hart Gibson, who has been ill.

Mrs. Meloy Phillips, of Washington, will spend the winter in Kentucky.

Entertain At Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Reid Rogers, of Mt. Sterling and Washington, entertained prettily at dinner this week at their home, on Farragut Square, in compliment to the American Miners to Panama and Mrs. Squires, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Brown and Mrs. Brown and other dignitaries were among the guests.

Gen. Marshall, U. S. A., and Mrs. Marshall, he formerly of Mason county, Ky., received at the first hop of the season given at Washington Barracks.

Mrs. Marshall was handsome in a costume of white lace over male costume suit. Miss Maitland Marshall was one of the belles of the affair.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Lincoln Dembits, of Louisville and Washington, are spending their honeymoon at the Homestead Hotel, Hot Springs.

Mrs. B. F. Pilson, formerly Miss Margaret Houston, of Louisville, has been convalescent at Atlantic City, after a serious illness. She has been accompanied by her daughters, Miss Zeina Pilson, a Washington beauty, and Mrs. Charles Adams Woods, of Philadelphia.

Dinner For Mrs. McComas.

Mrs. McComas, widow of Judge Louis E. McComas, formerly Upton Murr, of Louisville, after her return from Europe, has been stopping at the Washington Hotel. She is a member of the Washington Club and has been visiting in the city. She is a member of the Washington Club and has been visiting in the city. She is a member of the Washington Club and has been visiting in the city.

Drapers Return To Capital.

Gen. Draper and Mrs. Draper and Miss Margaret Draper have returned to their home on Farragut Square. Miss Draper will inaugurate her young ladyhood by acting as bridesmaid on November 24 at the marriage in Washington of Miss Darius Vinton with Miss Wells on Connecticut avenue. Miss Wells entertained at dinner informally this week for Mrs. McComas, who, after a visit to her old home in Charlottesville, will return to Washington for the winter and take an apartment. Mrs. McComas has sold her handsome residence on Wyoming and Connecticut avenues, built for her by her late husband.

Mrs. William E. Hall, wife of Gen. Hall, formerly Miss Therese Blackburn, poured tea at a chile reception given by the wife of Lieut. Col. Hodges, in honor of Mrs. Goethals, wife of Col. Goethals, chairman of the 15th annual Commemorative, Mrs. Richard Reid Rogers was among the guests.

Delivers Interesting Talk.

Miss Mary Helm, of Kentucky, delivered an interesting talk on "From Darkness to Light" at the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, at the third annual session of the mission study class, when the negro and his advancement were under discussion.

A number of pre-debut afternoon affairs have been arranged in compliment to Miss Lucinda Carpenter, nee-baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Darius Pennebaker, of Washington and Kentucky, who made her bow to society at her father's home in Georgetown, D. C., December 10.

Mrs. Barnett's Novel.

The many Washington friends and admirers of Mrs. Evelyn Sneed Barnett, of Louisville, are deeply interested in the debut this week of her novel, "The Dragnet," published by B. W. Huebsch, of New York. Mrs. Barnett holds a post of intimate grace and subtlety. As a literary critic, a fine in which she has been brilliantly identified for years, her keen psychological insight, her clear discriminations, her forcible grasp, has made her a master of her art. Although she has given her attention to literary work in various departments, "The Dragnet" is Mrs. Barnett's most ambitious fictional offering so far. Those who have had the privilege of reading the advance sheets of the book claim that "The Dragnet" is one of the big American novels of the period and are cordial in their felicitations to the charming author.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Watterson will remain the guest of their relative, Mrs. Stanley Mathews, at her home on I street until their return to Louisville on November 20.

Financial and Commercial MONETARY.

Saturday Evening, Nov. 20.—Money conditions have been unchanged all through the week so far as rate charges were concerned, but there has been a growing tendency toward greater caution. The call money has been freely at 5 per cent, and time loans have been at unchanged figures. The evidence has all been in the direction of easy money after the first of the year, with a plentiful supply before that time. The New York stock market has been in a similar frame of mind, with a decided bullish tendency prevailing. There has been no disposition to sell and the support behind the bulls has been formidable. Today's market was decidedly strong until the announcement of the adverse ruling against the Standard Oil Company, which produced a reaction. Government bonds have been firm throughout the week and the demand for railroad bonds has increased.

Locally, conditions have improved in tone, though the weakness of the stock exchange has been keenly felt. There has been less eagerness to sell and greater inquiry for the better class of stocks. Louisville money rates have remained at 5 and 6 per cent, the latter being the prevailing rate, with plenty of money at 5 per cent.

The report of the Clearing-house to-day was as follows:

Day's clearing	$2,373,373
Week's clearing	$22,941,100
Corresponding week last year	$11,902,975
Difference for week	$11,038,125

This week's session of the Louisville Stock Exchange has developed no great changes in quotations, but there has been a decidedly better sentiment. Offerings of stock have been fewer and at higher prices, while the inquiry for stocks has been more active. There has been the most active stock on the list, having advanced 3 points on some quiet, heavy buying of the stock. The day's trading was characterized by a large block wanted at this figure. Little of the stock for sale at present prices, it is said. The only important feature being the improvement in tone. Louisville brokers are confident the rising market has started and are holding the buying of stocks steady and real heavy after the first of the year. This is not improbable, in view of improving money conditions and the belief that the market will have plenty of spare money in another month or so.

Today's session was a little more active. There were four sales and offerings were light. Portland common moved up to $4 1/2, bid and sold at that, closing with more stock offered.

Portland preferred was 90 1/2, bid for ten shares.

Home Telephone was $2,000 offered at 72 and $1,000 offered at 70, and $1,000 bid for $1,000 and $1,000 offered at 107.

West Union common was three shares offered at 38.

City sewer was 10 1/2, bid for $2,000 and $2,000 offered at 10 1/2.

Home Telephone was 90 bid for $1,000, bid for $1,000 and $1,000 offered at 107.

Portland common was 100 shares offered at 34 1/2, bid for 100.

Louisville Traction common was 25 shares offered at 62.

City gas was 9 1/2, bid for $2,000.

Home Telephone was 110 1/2, bid for ten and ten offered at 110 1/2.

Louisville Traction common was 25 shares offered at 62.

STOCK MARKET REVIEW.

New York, Nov. 20.—Money on call nominal; time loans easier, 60 days 5 per cent; 90 days 4 1/2; 6 months 4 1/4; prime mercantile paper 3 1/2. Sterling exchange firm with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.82 1/2 for 60-day bills and at $4.84 1/2 for 90-day bills. Commercial bills $4.82 1/2 for 60-day bills and $4.84 1/2 for 90-day bills. Government bonds easy. Railroad bonds steady.

The decision of the United States Circuit Court at St. Paul against the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, declaring that corporation illegal and ordering its dissolution, was the great feature of the day's trading in the market. The news was widely expected and had the effect of turning a very active and strong market into one of extreme weakness. The importance of the decision and its far-reaching possibilities were freely acknowledged by officials of the corporation.

The case would be promptly taken to the court of last resort, in accordance with an agreement entered into some time ago between the Standard and the defendants.

Announcement of the decision came in the second hour of the brief session. There has previously been a resumption of the market in various specialties, including the copper share, one of which, Utah Copper, almost repeated its performance of a week ago, with an advance of 9 points.

There were several other stocks that were active, but the market was generally one of weakness. The first word from St. Louis there was a general selling movement, which at times bordered on demoralization. Not only were the local stocks sold, but the market was generally one of weakness.

There was some indication of a rally in the first trading, but this was offset by further liquidation, and the closing was weak.

WOMEN ONLY

To Take Part In Long Endurance Tour.

MANY PROMINENT DRIVERS FAVOR MOVEMENT.

OFFER OF AN APPROPRIATE TROPHY IS MADE.

PROFICIENT AUTO PILOTS.

The movement to promote an endurance race for women is gaining ground, and it is probable that next summer plans will be perfected, says the New York Times. "A number of automobile clubs for women have been organized in different sections of the United States, and several offers for an appropriate trophy have been made, providing a responsible body will undertake the event. There are a number of prominent women drivers who can operate an auto as well as many of the best men pilots and each season finds a considerable increase in the number of women who become owners of motor-driven vehicles. A few years ago a woman driving a car unattended attracted much attention, and was viewed with undisguised curiosity by all who saw her. There was only now and then a woman who had the temerity to make an attempt to operate an auto.

New Road Record.

"Mrs. K. H. Otis, of Cleveland, O., one of the most prominent women automobile drivers, established a new transcontinental road record average in the relay run between Philadelphia and Seattle last month, when driving in the cross continental relay race, carrying President Taft's message. She drove her sixty-horsepower Stinson car from Pittsburgh to Upper Sandusky, a distance of 238 miles, in ten hours and thirty minutes. The most remarkable feature of this run was that the greater part of the drive was made through sticky clay mud. Mrs. Otis made but two stops in the entire trip, one for gasoline and oil at Canton, Ohio, and the other at Sandusky, where a demonstration was arranged by Mayor Carlisle. Mrs. Otis drove a remarkable race, and although she was nearly exhausted at the finish, she drove her car as fast as the finish as when she started. It was a thorough test of endurance for the driver.

Mrs. Alice R. Ramsey, of Hackensack, N. J., took part in the transcontinental trip from New York to San Francisco. She was accompanied by Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Atwood and Mrs. Janis, and drove her Maxwell car during the entire trip. Mrs. Ramsey is an enthusiastic motorist, and while she has not participated in any organized run, she has toured the country in her own car, covering hundreds of miles every week. Miss Anna Lloyd and Mrs. Morgan Simpson are inseparable motorists, and when touring the country alternate at the wheel. Although they have been driving several years, neither of them has even been in an accident.

Drove Across Continent.

"Mrs. Joan Newton Cuneo is probably one of the best known women drivers in America. She has taken part in many runs and speed contests. On one occasion she drove across the continent with three lady friends, and has always figured prominently in the Golden Tours. Miss Alice Potter, of Potter, Ill., who drove from Elgin to New York and back on a shipping tour, with three women and Mrs. Clark Fisher, with others of note in the world of motoring, have all expressed their intention of entering a tour promoted for women only.

"During the past year more women have taken part in long runs than ever before. This is especially true in the runs between New York and San Francisco, and the runs have proven beyond the slightest doubt that a trip across the country in a motor car is now too difficult for women, and so far as safety is concerned they are as well off while touring as when taking short spins on nearby country roads.

Denver, Nov. 20.—Mrs. Allen F. Read was today found guilty of attempted extortion by a jury in Judge Shearer's court. Counsel for Mrs. Read secured a stay of ten days to prepare a petition for a new trial. The defendant was refused bail. The penalty is imprisonment from one to fourteen years.

one of the city's "young-looking man."
Shortly after the bank of which he is president, was founded, a stranger stepped into his office one day and said, "I am Mr. Hutchinson," said the man at the desk.
"You are wrong, but I desire to see Mr. Charles L. Hutchinson," was the reply.
"Excuse me, sir," said the stranger, as he eyed the youthful looking man before him, "but I want to speak with the president of the bank."
"I am that man," said Mr. Hutchinson.

A PAGE FOR CHILDREN

Aloha Club.

OFFICERS.

President—Vanhoe.
Vice President—Rowena.
Treasurer—The Little Colonel.
Secretary—Ouida.
Club Colors—White and Gold.
Motto—To be selected.
Object—To promote good will and friendship among our young readers and to contribute to their pleasure.

Jeffersonville, Ind.—Dear Aunt Ruth: I would like very much to become a member of the Aloha Club, as I like to read the children's page. This is my first letter, and I hope it will be accepted. If my name is taken, I will choose another. Aunt Ruth, please have your picture in the paper soon. I would like to see you very much. I am delighted to have two pages for the boys and girls' department. I will agree with the other cousins to have white and gold for our badge ribbons. I hope Mr. Wabbeaker will not get this letter. With love to all the cousins. From your young friend, MINNETONKA.

Louisville, Ky.—Dear Aunt Ruth: Having read the Children's Page for some time I now ask permission to become a member of the Aloha Club. As I am fond of reading Mrs. Meade's books I have chosen my nom de plume from one. I will describe myself: I am a blonde and have blue eyes and am thirteen years old. I enjoy reading the letters from the cousins. I think Rosalind, The Little Colonel, and Jane write such interesting letters. I am glad we have two pages on account of the club getting so many members. As my letter is getting long, I will close with love to you and the cousins. I remain your niece and cousin, MISS NONNENTY.

Dear Aunt Ruth: Here comes Beverly, of Graustark again. The page is so interesting I just can't stay away. Aunt Ruth, a mistake was made about my last initial being an "E." It is not an "E" but a "B." Mary Ware No. 2, I think I am acquainted with you. You sit near Lloyd Sherman in school. I am not acquainted with Lloyd Sherman, although I know her when I see her. Ginger, wasn't it a shame you did not get to keep your nom? I think you are a certain good friend of mine, are you not? Cousins, how do you like to go to the woods on a Saturday and Sunday? How is one who likes it. On a certain hill near this little city of Graustark is a lovely place to take your lunch and gather nuts. It overlooks the little town. The view is beautiful. On top you look over the town, and if you could see the Kentucky River you would think you were at Frankfort.

Yale, I fancy you looked cute at the fancy dress ball. You must have had a fine time. I think we all agree to A Superfine Boy.

Dear Aunt Ruth: Here is another sophomore who would like to join your club. I suppose a great many of you know me. Gay, you and your chums, and of course you know me. I was surprised when I saw you had taken the nom I suggested. Why don't more of the cousins send their pictures to our page? Malcolm McIntyre, aren't your initials D. L. 2. Pay Melville said she would like to have your picture. First Violin, your poem was splendid. We would like to hear from your cousin Mary Kahn, your story was fine. You certainly deserved the first prize, Fay Johnson, the heading was beautiful this week. Mary, you and Fay both know me. Now, everyone guess "hard and long." Who is ALEX SHEELY?

Prize Winners.

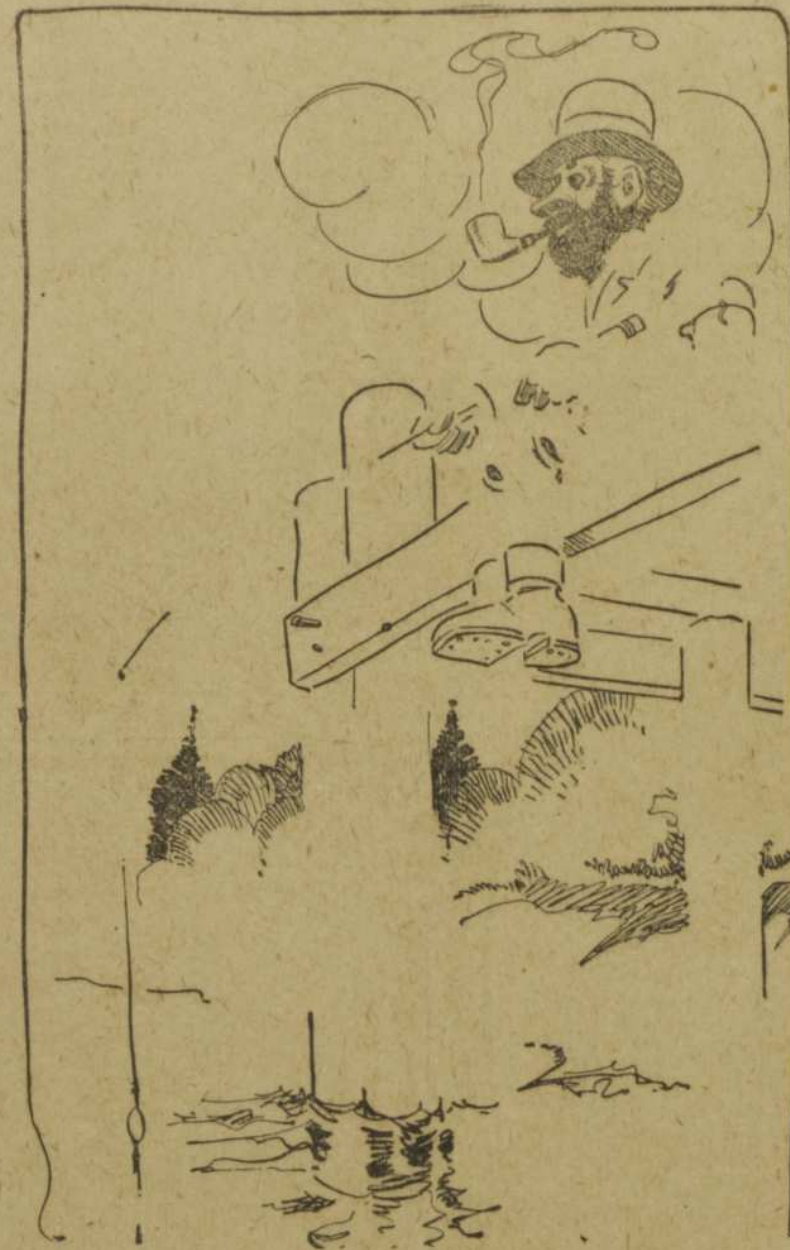

Several of the Literary Club members and a few others tried to complete the unfinished story, "An Adventure at Old Point." The subject was a little hard and far from every-day experience, perhaps, to be as popular as most of the topics given. Some of our talented writers, however, rose bravely to the occasion. The following were successful in the contest:

The first prize of $1 was given to Beatrice M. Harrell, 1208 West Jefferson street, Frankfort, Ky.
The second prize was won by Clara O'Connor, Frankfort, Ky.
The third prize was awarded to Catherine H. Lewis, 715 South Clay street.
Honorable Mention—Ruth Vezzer, 814 Cawthon street; Melba Schaus, Tell City, Ind.; Jessie Allen, Lawrenceburg, Ky.
The result of the contest is to give great success to three of the bright stars of the Literary Club to bring in three new members and to contribute six interesting variations on the same story which will all be published this week and next for our entertainment.

NOTICE—Prize winners and those given honorable mention who live in Louisville, and city children whose poems, essays, stories, drawings, Humane Club letters are published to-day will please call for prizes and club buttons at the Courier-Journal building, room 311, on next Tuesday afternoon, between 3 and 5 o'clock. Badges and prizes for children outside of the city are sent by mail.

Here is a peaceful fisherman. It is customary to call them peaceful, although it seems likely that the fish may not regard the subject in that light. The picture is left unfinished, and you are asked to complete it. A first prize of $1 is offered for the best drawing, and a second and a third prize of a book will be given for the next best drawings. Drawings must not be sent later than next Thursday, and should be addressed to the Contest Department, Children's Page, Courier-Journal. All contributions to the Children's Page must be written on only one side of the paper, and must be signed with the sender's full name, age and address.

Literary Club Stories.

Beginning of Unfinished Story, "An Adventure at Old Point."

"O how I hate French! and practicing is worse," muttered Araminta, savagely. She tossed her conversation book to the other end of the sofa and sent an unnamable glance toward the piano, where Cerny's "School of Velocity," open at the first etude, stood upon the open page and inviting key-board, for Araminta loved the piano. "If Miss De Mont would only give me pretty things," she said to herself, resentfully, "but it is always the same, and the tone and the correct position, and I want to play pieces—lots of pieces." Her eyes lingered a moment upon the open page and the inviting key-board, for Araminta loved the piano. She had had lessons with her governess in the morning, but Miss De Mont had her "hours off" in the afternoon and was now gone to Norfolk on a shopping trip.

Araminta was used to being alone. She was an only child and her stepmother "went out" a great deal. Little girl as she was, she was very much the coming of this new mother to usurp the first place in her adored father's heart and had repaid her with a series of misdeeds and confidences. Mrs. Grayson, a kind and beautiful woman, was half-sister and half-anxious at the superb 11-year-old dignity and reserve with which she was met by the little girl she longed to love. But, being wise, she had not played it bad, very bad, so I have to go over and over it with my hands and says, "good, Juliet, good."

"Oh, so you are Juliet, the great child pianist, the wonder of the musical world who is to play in the Norfolk concert to-night?" exclaimed the surprised girl, remembering a certain party she had seen in the hotel lobby. "I am Juliet, but suppose we go in the room where we can talk for, for I am not Juliet, but a sudden frankness, then led her into a well-furnished apartment, where a grand piano attracted special attention. Araminta looked around the room and said softly: "You're all alone, Juliet, and—"

"No, I'm not alone. I have my piano, but my friend in fact it is everything. Then seeing her questioning looks he said: "No, I am an orphan, but I have a step-mother once, and she is a very good mother, and I only know how greatly she loved me when I heard of her death, two years ago. But she has died, and I am now of her own to obtain money to send me to Paris, where I studied music. Oh, why did I not love her! With a boyish gesture he hastily brushed the tears from his eyes with his sleeve.

"I, too, have a step-mother, but I cannot love her, Juliet, not for the world," and Araminta shook her head, determinedly.

"Why does she love you, Araminta, and you do not realize it. Try to love her, as step-mothers are not to be loved, but as mothers they are. Yes, yes, yes, you're talking like a poor thing, but come play me something, for I love the piano, but how I hate etudes." The boy laughed merrily and said that he, too, was not fond of the etudes, but that Signor Petro, who was a good friend of his, had given him a book of his etudes very often, so to please him Juliet had given her a few etudes. So saying he went to the piano and played such an exquisite place as lovely trills and chords that Araminta left her chair and stood near the small pianist with clasped hands, devoutly wishing that she could play like Juliet. When the music had ceased she held out her hand with a quiet "Thank you," that pleased the lad more than compliments would ever have done, then before he could answer she had gone into her room.

When Mrs. Grayson returned some minutes later she found Araminta at the piano playing over and over the etude, and then how sincerely the step-mother wished that the girl would learn to love her as she had learned to conquer her dislike of the etude, not knowing that the few words of the little pianist had greatly impressed Araminta. A slight motion betrayed Mrs. Grayson's presence and to her own surprise Araminta sprang from the stool and hid her face on the astonished step-mother's shoulder, sobbing, "I love you—mother!"

Second Prize.

COMPLETION OF "AN ADVENTURE AT OLD POINT."

Araminta turned and beheld a dark, handsome boy, whose handsome eyes lit up at a sweet, childish face. "Were you not listening to my music?" he asked in the same shy, forlorn tone.

"Oh!" cried Araminta, "was that you playing just now?"

"Yes," answered the boy. "I was practicing for the concert. I hope you will excuse me for interrupting you, but I am so lonesome for want of a companion. You see," he added, "mamma died when I was only a few years old, and my dear papa only a few months ago."

Araminta's kind little heart immediately went out to him, for she had seen death and knew what it was. "My dear, beautiful mamma died a good while ago," she said, "and another is now in her place."

"Oh," said the boy, "but you have a dear, kind father, and I know your stepmother must be the same (if he made the choice), while I am all alone."

"Yes," said the little girl, "I have much to be thankful for, but I have shown me how it is. But I must be going now," she said suddenly. "For papa will be home and he will worry me if I am not there."

"Will you not accept these tickets?" he asked, thrusting an envelope into her hand.

"Oh, thank you, a thousand times," said she. "I want to go to this concert so badly. And let me thank you for your beautiful music."

All evening long Araminta talked of nothing but the boy with the wonderful eyes and the great talent for music. "Papa," she said, "believe me, I must be the wonderful child musician who plays to-night. I wish I had asked him."

"Well, dear," said her father, "I will take you behind the scenes to-night, for Eleanor and I are going to accompany you."

"Thank you, my dear, kind papa," exclaimed Araminta with a big brave hug.

At last the long evening wore away and shadows crept into the parlor. Araminta looked very sweet and dainty in a blue silk dress, a pearl necklace being the only ornament she wore. It was placed around the slender, white throat, and every gleam from the firelight made her more beautiful.

She was waiting for her father and "Miss Eleanor," but not long, for a few minutes later they came down the handsome stairs, and Araminta, papa and Miss Eleanor drove away in the carriage. All through the evening Araminta sat in the hotel room, waiting for the beautiful melody to be played and sung. The prima donna's sublime voice rose and fell like silvery waves floating on peaceful waters, and again, like the tinkling of the murmuring brook, so sweet was it. Not an eye in the vast assembly was dry as the last silvery note of the sweet voice died away.

And then the child musician played. Araminta could not tell the time, but she had met that afternoon. When he arose from the stool "Miss Eleanor's" face was very pale, and her hands were cold. "Thank you, my dear, kind papa," she said, "I am so glad to see you."

"Oh!" she sobbed, "I am so glad to see you, but I am so lonely that I stopped to listen to music," said Araminta. "I love music, but I do hate to practice old etudes and positum all the time. I want to play a real piece."

"I was on my way to the pier, and won't you go with me?" asked Araminta. The little girl said he would be delighted to go, so off they went for a pleasant walk. "My mother is dead," the little girl said. "She loved music, and if she was living she would take me to the concert to-night to hear the boy play."

"Well," said Carl, "which was the little boy's name. Maybe your governess will take you to see him."

When they reached the hotel they asked Miss De Mont and she promised to take Araminta if she would promise her lesson the next day. This Araminta readily consented to do. When they arrived at the concert that night and several pieces had been played the name of the noted child pianist was announced and who should be but her little friend, Carl! This quite astonished Araminta. After the prelude, there came the same shower of crystal, bird-like notes that she had heard the afternoon before.

Carl was greatly applauded for his brilliant performance. Araminta waited for him after the concert was over, and they went to the hotel together. The next day Carl played for Araminta and told her how he had to practice the position and many etudes when he started.

Araminta always remembered her little friend and how beautifully he could play. She never again quarreled about her practicing. She grew to be a fine pianist, and when she had finished her education in America her governess took her abroad and in Berlin she met her old friend, Carl.

They renewed their friendship, which grew into a great love, and in a few years a quiet wedding was performed in the old Cathedral in Berlin.

The Courier-Journal Humane Club

OUR BADGE:

OUR PLEDGE:

I will try to be kind to all harmless living creatures, and to protect them from cruel usage.

Dear Aunt Ruth: It seems to me as if the puzzles are getting harder and harder. I could not work this one. The other day I went out in the country to see how everything was getting on. We now have seven young fox terrier pups, the mother of which is kind enough to let you pick one up and play with it. When I went back to where we kept our pony and called to it it recognized my voice and came running to me.

It has been such a long time since I have written to the Humane Club that I intend to write several letters to it. While I was playing with some friends I saw a boy call a dog to him. When the dog got almost there he threw a stone at it and hit it.

I hate to see animals badly treated. It seems to me that the Humane Club is getting smaller and smaller, while the Aloha Club is getting larger. Your loving nephew, PIERCE BUTLER ATWOOD.

We are so glad to have boy members in this club for just the reason that it seems an irresistible temptation to some boys to torment every helpless animal within their reach. The boys in the Humane Club will have many more opportunities than the girls to work for it, as they are more apt to be witnesses to the cowardly cruelty of the other sort of boys. Well-bred boys—"decent fellows," as the English say—would of course never be guilty of such acts.

Louisville, Ky.—Dear Aunt Ruth: At last I have something to tell the Aloha Club. But that is not the sign that I have not been taking interest in it. Well, now for my story. The other day a little cat came to our door, sickly looking and with one poor little eye closed. Mother said she had seen it before, and she failed to tell me. Of course, it received admittance to the club members and was treated kindly. I gave it milk, meat, potatoes and bread, and that afternoon I saw that its eye was open. I kept it on the porch, which I thought the most appropriate place. It stayed with us that night and also the next day, when another little cat came into our yard. It was not sick, however, and I brought it on the porch as company for the other cat. I still have them both, but do not know how long they will stay with me, as they are but kittens yet.

There must be a good many members now, as every Sunday I see just lots of new faces.

Aunt Ruth, do you not think that we should have a heading for the Humane Club? I think that this would cause more interest in our club, do you not? With much faith in all members and lots of success, I remain, MABEL ANN BLANKENBAKER.

Louisville, Ky.—Dear Aunt Ruth: I wish to become a member of the Humane Club. I am 10 years of age. I am in the Fourth grade at school. I go to the Parkland school, try to be kind to every harmless living creature, as the pledge says. Well, as this is my first letter, I will call it "Aloha." I am writing such a button badge. Once there was a dog who used to go out to the car to get his master's papers. This dog would go in a corner and stay there until his master would call him. This dog's name was GIP. One day I saw him and he was so friendly he accidentally shot his dog. I remain your sincere nephew, WALTER WIBBELS.

porch, which I thought the most appropriate place. It stayed with us that night and also the next day, when another little cat came into our yard. It was not sick, however, and I brought it on the porch as company for the other cat. I still have them both, but do not know how long they will stay with me, as they are but kittens yet.

Aunt Ruth, do you not think that we should have a heading for the Humane Club? I think that this would cause more interest in our club, do you not? With much faith in all members and lots of success, I remain, MABEL ANN BLANKENBAKER.

Louisville, Ky.—Dear Aunt Ruth: I wish to become a member of the Humane Club. I am 10 years of age. I am in the Fourth grade at school. I go to the Parkland school, try to be kind to every harmless living creature, as the pledge says. Well, as this is my first letter, I will call it "Aloha." I am writing such a button badge. Once there was a dog who used to go out to the car to get his master's papers. This dog would go in a corner and stay there until his master would call him. This dog's name was GIP. The attractive children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Webster, of New Albany.

Nan At Camp Chicopee.

EXACTLY how the afternoon passed Nan could hardly remember; how she played through the tennis tournament and won the "ladies' single," and lost in the doubles because of that stupid Philadelphia girl's "foul," all were confused impressions, mingled with her pride and happiness in the boys' success; for the catamaran made a beautiful run to the head of the lake, and everyone was loud in its praises. The afternoon passed in one long series of joyful triumphs for the boys, and when evening came, the pavilion was gorgeous with Chinese lanterns, and on the raised platform were the "adders" from the village, whose music, if not classical, was contagious in its rhythm and merriment. Everybody was in the gayest mood.

Nan, who so seldom, except in masquerading, had any opportunity to wear other clothes than rough-and-ready ones, seemed to the boys a very much transformed person in a wonderfully befrilled muslin. Nan was a little in awe of herself in "dress up," and some what self-conscious in the light garb of fashion, which the city girls carried with such ease, and was glad to be able to forget herself in the jolly figures of a familiar row or dance.

The boys themselves were allowed no full dress at camp. For them a lighter knickerbocker and stiff shirt, and the only change from corduroys and flannels; but they were a handsome set of fellows, big and little, bronzed and brawny, and fell as easily into the dancing as though it had been their nightly habit all the summer weeks.

Nan did not forget that she had a word to say to Marshall, and when he came to claim her for a dance saw her opportunity.

Marshall was one of the senior camp boys, having begun his life at the lake when, a delicate lad of 12, he was sent up to Mr. Ratcliffe to be educated for one summer, and had returned year after year, though it was long since his physique had shown signs of delicacy. There he had gained strength and ripeness, and he loved the camp and cared nothing for the gay, fashionable resorts frequented by his mother and sisters. He was one of those plain-featured boys, who depend upon a good figure and intelligence for their claims to good looks. Somewhat freckled, with light gray, heavy-lashed eyes, an ample mouth which an incipient mustache but served to outline, Marshall's face would never be his passport to the favor of the fair sex. But his dextrous hand, easy carriage, broad shoulders, kindly manners and clever tongue made him a favorite.

He had always treated Nan as a big brother, would until this summer when, conscious of her freshman dignity, or of Nan's budding maturity and attractiveness, his manner toward her had marked of an odd mixture of gallantry and sentimental familiarity, entirely new to Nan in her association with the boys.

He had even on this very evening called her "Miss Nan," much to her surprise and disgust, but as an unpleasant consciousness of her false position in the regatta. When in the pauses of the quadrille Marshall had ventured to remark that she was very pretty, poor Nan's amazement knew no bounds.

Marshall, what have I done, or what is the matter with you that you should treat me so to-night? I begin to think you are angry with me for taking the race. And after all, I have given you the race. You could have come in easily enough. I wish you had. I wanted to play and no vanity. At any rate, I have learned a good lesson, and I won't try for honors with you boys again, unless you will all swear to treat me just as though I were a boy.

Nan's cheeks were flaming and she stamped her foot impatiently. "I shall colored, thereby causing his freckled countenance to assume a magenta hue, and his confusion at having his ruse thus baldly presented baffled for the time his usual composure, and he was glad of the interruption which the ladies' grand chain gave to the tete-a-tete. He was forced into some explanation it was quite evident, for Nan was not one to accept of feigned sickness, however much he had deceived the judges. He was only half ready for Nan as she came back, and he stammered.

"I don't know what you mean, truly; I am not angry in the least. Why should I be? I have treated you as differently? I am sure I wanted you to have the race, and you pulled splendidly. You did deserve it. I was very kind of you, though, but I mean you to take the prize. I'll never touch it."

"Oh, Nan, that is punishing me more than I deserve. After all, you pushed me to winning, and you didn't get the race any way, and haven't any claim on the prize. Now let's let my friends. You look real mad. You know I may not come back next summer, for just as likely as not I will have to tutor all summer. I am such a lunkhead as my books. At least you won't spoil my last regatta for me," said Marshall, irresolutely.

"I should think I had done that already. At least you must take the prize as a souvenir of Chicopee."

"I would much rather take your friendship. We have been playfellows for five years. Let's not quarrel because we are growing up. I'll promise not to tell you again that you look pretty till you go to your first ball, nor to call you Miss Nan till you go to college. If you will let the prize stand as it is."

Nan laughed.

"I think that a foolish bargain. Of course you won't call me 'Miss Nan,' because I don't want to, and as for the ball, I shall never have the chance to go to a ball. As to college, I am afraid that is only a castle in the air too."

"All happiness to him who knows how to wait. You will go to college and beat us fellows at classics and sciences yet."

"Oh, I'll never beat any of you except by a fluke like to-day."

"Yes, you will. Your head is better than most of ours. If your muscles are strong, here's your next partner, Charlie. Come, is it peace or war?"

"Peace," and Nan gave him her hand as she went off with Lewis.

Though a year her junior, Lewis was as tall as Nan, and they were fair to look upon as they joined the dancers. Lewis was radiant with success and

You are quite warm, almost burning as the game goes.

"Then I'm to go to spend the winter with them and go to school."

"Exactly, little Yankee, you have it. With French, Latin, French, French, French, dancing and music and be a fine young lady, have tutors and masters, or take up something serious?"

"I know you'd get it. Wasn't it fine to win though?"

"I am not so awfully puffed up after all, Lewis said Nan humbly. "Did the race look quite fair to you?"

"Why not fair? Marshall just gave out guess he start smoking. If a fellow can keep up, he gets the gold, then he has to lose the race. You surely don't think he deserves the prize?"

"I'm not so sure that he doesn't."

"Well, don't be a goose, Nan. Take all that glory you can get. It's my motto."

Feeling that Marshall might not like too much made of his generosity, and not wanting to start smoking, if a fellow can keep up, he gets the gold, then he has to lose the race. You surely don't think he deserves the prize?"

CLEARING HIS NAME

Being a Real Detective Story For Boys.

CHAPTER X.

IN the last chapter I told you of the arrival of a stranger who believed that he knew something of the history of Jimmy Benson, the lad was sent for, and the three of us entered into a long talk. The stranger was from Sacramento, Cal. He stated that about ten years before, he was living neighbor to a family named Chester, in the city mentioned. They had only one child—a little boy named Philip.

One day when Philip was about 2 years old, he was playing in the yard when I finally did, this was the message that greeted my eyes:

"I have a grand mother. There is no doubt that I am the long-lost boy. I shall come back to Glendale, and she will come with me."

You may think this ended my case, but it didn't. I have been saving another piece of good news for you. Jimmy knew it before he went away.

Uncle Robert may have been a hard-hearted man in driving bargains, but he had a soft side to him. He had taken a great fancy to Jimmy, though he did not show it too much, and had made a will in his favor. We found the will among the papers on the floor after the funeral.

"So do be good to your sincere friend, 'HORTENSE D. PRINCE.'"

Long before Nan had finished reading the letter her father's and mother's eyes were brimming full of tears, and when she laid the letter down she threw her arms about her mother's neck and cried half for joy and half for sorrow.

"I don't know what to say, mamma. I want to go, but can you spare me?"

"Yes, dear, I think it is for your advantage, and have decided to accept Mr. Prince's offer, if you are willing to go," said Mrs. Ratcliffe, falling into a sob when she could, but just let me take the race."

"Why should Marshall give you the race, dear?"

"Oh, because I am a girl, don't you see, and he thought it would be mean to take advantage of that later, papa. Nan said this in an excited tone, which brought in Marian, who took in the situation and said:

"Ouida" is. I can hardly wait from one Sunday to another to see the new "Ouida." I was very sorry my "Ouida" was taken, but I have chosen one that suits me just as well. How many of the cousins go to the high school on Hill street? I should be glad to correspond with some of the cousins. S. G. Pettus, your drawing was fine and I congratulate you for being so lucky. That may I do? There are so many new "Ouidas" that I cannot keep track of them. Why do not more of the Jeffersonville girls take an interest in the page and write? My letter is getting rather lengthy for this time, so I will close, with love to everyone. Keeping Lady Jane and the rest guessing, I sign myself,

Cinderella Down to Date

By H. S. HUNTINGTON.

PART II.

JACK-THE-GIANT-KILLER didn't look a bit heroic as he dodged about, trying to get behind little Goldlocks; and at length he dropped his sword and began to climb a tree. But he got only half way up the trunk and there he stuck.

The girls all screamed, and were going to run away, but Red Riding-hood happened to look around and saw something trotting out of the wood. When she saw him she stopped and sat down on the grass and just laughed until the tears rolled down her cheeks.

"It was really quite delightful. Only Jack-the-Giant-Killer, looking down from where he was clinging, didn't like it a bit."

"What are you laughing about?" he growled.

"O, dear! O, dear me!" panted Red Riding-hood. "Oh! I'm too funny for anything. It's only just Mary's Little Lamb."

Sure enough, the lamb came running out when Red Riding-hood called it, and laid its head in her lap.

"I ain't afraid of it," screamed Jack-the-Giant-Killer. He slid down the tree and caught up his sword. "I'll kill it!" he belloved.

"If you do I'll slap your face," she cried very fiercely.

Jack-the-Giant-Killer scowled and swagged, but by this time they knew that his courage amounted to so. Cinderella and Red Riding-hood and little Goldlocks and the Lamb all ran right at him; and they scared him so that he fairly took to his heels and ran away.

"The great coward!" said Red Riding-hood, to take Mary's Little Lamb for a wolf or a bear!

"Oh, but they are really true bears in the wood," said Goldlocks. "I saw them and they were dreadful!"

"Did you see them have a glass slipper?" asked Cinderella.

"I don't know," said Goldlocks; "but they had nice chairs and beds and excellent porridge. I'm very fond of porridge when it's neither too hot nor too cold."

"Sold by all grocers," squeaked a little fellow at their feet. He was a very little man, so small that they had not noticed him before. And he was busy eating advertising notices on all the trees and fences and houses.

"What are you doing that for?" asked Goldlocks.

"I do it to improve the landscape," said the little man, "and to teach the children to read. And I'm paid for it!"

"Cinderella!"

"Sometimes more, sometimes less. Yesterday they gave me a bean."

"A bean?—that's all?" asked Cinderella. "Isn't that very poor pay?"

"That depends on how you look at it. A bean alone isn't much. But if I plant a bean, it will grow into a tree, and I'll be paid for it. And if I plant those, I shall get a peck. And if I plant those they will yield twenty bushels. And if I plant those, they will yield a hundred bushels."

"But," objected Cinderella, "you will have to wait a long time unless your beans grow very fast."

"This kind of seed is a rapid grower," said the little man.

"Oh! do plant it now and let's see," exclaimed Cinderella.

"So I will," said the little man. He made a hole in the ground, put the bean in and covered it up. No sooner had he done so than the earth broke away, and a bean plant began to rise very fast.

"O, dear me!" squeaked the little man. "I've ruined! I've lost the bean! It came up out of the ground and now I'll never see it again. Yes, I will! I'll climb for it!" And he threw off his coat and began to climb up the beanstalk. But as he climbed it kept growing.

Cinderella called after him, "If you see a little slipper up there, please bring it down."

"I will," said the little man. But the bean plant kept growing, and the little man kept climbing, until he was quite out of sight.

"I'm afraid I never shall see that slipper again," sighed Cinderella. And she said good-bye to the others and went slowly and sadly home.

But next morning the following advertisement appeared in the newspaper:

"If the lady who dropped a small glass slipper at the Court Ball will please write to all of the cousins, I will be glad to hear of something to her advantage."

Cinderella saw this, and wrote at once to all of the cousins. The King's officers came with the slipper. He had a black dress suit and a feather in his cap, and a little golden sword strapped to his side.

"Have you brought me my slipper?" asked Cinderella.

"My dear young lady," said the celebrated diplomat, for such he was, "I have done myself that honor. But the prince has been so kind as to give me the slipper without first making certain of the owner by a test."

"What is that?" asked Cinderella.

"The lady is to try the slipper on. Now your sisters, whom I first met when I came here, though perfect in all respects, failed to meet the requirements in this one particular. Their feet—! I whisper it only in confidence—were much too large."

"At first I was greatly disappointed, but I thought me to ask if there were any other ladies of the Kingdom who were as small as I am. I am extremely glad to hear that there is one, except one who—I hesitate to mention it—was performing menial services in a part of the dwelling which I am credibly informed is known as the kitchen."

"I'm afraid I shall never see that slipper again," sighed Cinderella. And she said good-bye to the others and went slowly and sadly home.

The celebrated diplomat laid a handkerchief on the floor, to protect his fine clothes. Then he knelt down. Cinderella took off her left boot, and the gentleman held the slipper while she put her foot into it. Of course, it fitted exactly.

The diplomat got up and made a very low bow again. Then he kissed Cinderella on the cheek. "I have a very surprising thing to do."

"Madam," he said, "I congratulate you. The prince has just now seen you. He is a very handsome young man, and he is very rich. He has a castle and a court and a lot of money. He has no means of finding you save by

STORIES OF THE SURVIVORS.

FIRE BREAKS OUT IN ST. PAUL MINE AGAIN.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 20.—At midnight a small fire broke out in the mine, cutting off the rescue work. Fire apparatus had to be lowered and a stream of water had again to be turned into the mine. It is feared if the fire is not extinguished shortly many of the men will perish. Up to midnight only twenty men have been brought to the surface.

The fire appeared to be spreading and the heat grew more intense. R. E. Maxwell, a mining engineer in the rescue party, was overcome and had to be hurriedly brought to the surface.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 20.—The gamut from despair to a hysteria of hope was run here to-day when twenty miners, entombed in the St. Paul mine for a week, almost to the hope, were brought to the surface alive.

The story of their sufferings and the heroism of their resourceful leaders is one of the most thrilling in all the black history of mining disasters.

The Great News Comes.

Dawn broke with the bearers of stretchers moving from the pit mouth to the tent which served as a morgue with bodies swollen and scorched almost beyond human semblance. Forty of them had been brought up and most of them identified, when the marvelous report shot through the prostrate community: "They've found them alive—they've found them alive!"

In a moment the morgue was deserted scarcely to be revisited while the crowd, fairly insane with the great hope which had sprung like a miraculous flame from the ashes of despair, rushed to the pit.

All thought was of the men who were alive.

Seventy More Still Alive.

It took six hours to bring the survivors to the surface. Meanwhile a report spread that seventy or more men were alive in a far-reach of the mine, cut off from escape by a bank of black damp between their barricade and the main shaft.

But two oxygen helmets remained at the mine, the others having been started back to Pittsburgh this morning, and with this scant equipment two experts began a new exploration. At 9 o'clock to-night they emerged, their oxygen tanks being exhausted, and reported no success.

"There are other resourceful leaders among the missing and they, like Walte, Clelland and others, may have led their men to comparative safety," said M. D. Eckert, State's Attorney here. "The search is now for the living."

Women Refuse To Despair.

Less optimistic notes were sounded by others, but the women, with hope born afresh, refused to believe anything but the best and haunted the mine far into the night, seizing frantically at every straw of encouragement offered. The following names, some of them which were not vouched for, were given out by Dr. M. C. Weeks as the official list of the men rescued alive:

Thomas Richards.
John Lortimer.
Thomas White.
George Edley, mine inspector.
Walter Walte, a pit boss.
John Brown.
Frank Walte.
Rogelio Manilla.

Women Look For Loved Ones.

From the top of the hoisting shaft the women drew the faces of the survivors as they passed through. As night drew on the whole scene was revealed by a pale moonlight and the flickering lights of torches worn on the caps of the rescuers. A hundred feet overhead stood the skeleton framework of the mining machinery. Each time the signal sounded from the hoist for the cage to come up from the mine the noise of the crowd subsided into murmuring expectancy.

"Hoist her up," came from the depths. "Hoist her up," repeated the engineer overhead.

Press Forward To See.

Then the men and women pressed forward against the line of soldiers and ropes, determined to get as near as possible to peer into the faces of the survivors as they marched by. "Everybody be quiet, please don't cheer," warned the guards. The machinery of the hoisting apparatus rumbled and screeched as the cage came upward. Hearts beat faster. Would there be in this load a live one who had been mourned during seven days as dead? This question flashed through a hundred minds. The gangway narrowed as each anxious looker instinctively pressed forward. "Here they come now, look sharp."

A woman here and there who could not see, held up a child and cautioned it: "Look and try if you can see papa when they pass."

Cheering Is Checked.

The machinery stopped. The cage was up and a dozen torches shed a dingy light on the contents of the cage. There stood the rescuers, wearing only rubber coats and white caps. Between them, wrapped in militia blankets, they held the rescued men, some standing, others carried in arms, slowly the procession moved through the gangway. A burst of applause started from the crowd, but a raised hand from the militiamen brought silence.

It was a critical moment for the hopes of many. Mothers and wives stretched forth their arms, murmuring, "Billie" or "Frank" or "Oh, Andy, are you there? Speak to me, I'm there." The blankets drawn over the heads of the men hid their faces and prevented identification from the crowd. Not receiving a reply, the women tore toward the sleeping cars, imporing and begging anyone to get them good news. Overcome by appeals, a rescuer called out the name of the man he was escorting. "George Eddy," he shouted. "We've got George Eddy here."

"Oh, George," came a piercing woman's cry from the crowd. "Is it you? Come here, George, here I am waiting for you."

Too Weak To Reply.

Eddy, who was a mine inspector, was too weak to reply, and could only submit to the escort, who carried him silently to the car.

At the foot of the car steps the crowd was kept back and the women, almost hysterical through joy, or through disappointment, clung to the hand rails, pitifully imploring those inside to let them enter.

A dramatic moment came when William Clelland was brought up. News of the disaster a week ago Robert Clelland, a brother, and also a miner, rushed here from South Wilmington, Ill. He was informed, arriving that all the entombed men were dead. He offered his help as a rescuer and declared he would remain here until every body was brought up.

To-day he was in the rescue party. As the survivors were brought through the gallery to the hoisting shaft, wrapped in blankets, Robert assisted in the case.

Brings Brother To Surface.

In the first load that went up was some one whom Robert did not recognize because of the blankets. The survivors were put in the sleeping cars under the care of nurses and doctors and Robert went down the shaft for another load. He was coming out of the cage again when a friend stepped up and tapped him on the shoulder. "Bob, don't you know that Will is up?"

Robert turned pale and staggered. "Yes, alive. He's up alive. Why, Bob, you brought him up yourself, wrapped in blankets."

Robert was so overwrought he had to be relieved from rescue work and was himself taken into the sleeping car.

First To Go Home.

In a little four-room cottage, "three doors from the lively stable across the street," Mrs. George Subacus became the envy of all at nightfall, for her husband, of all the rescued, was the first to be taken to his home. Subacus and his brother, James, were among the first survivors to reach the surface. A reporter, led by a Lithuanian interpreter, found Mrs. Subacus, the happiest woman in Cherry, shoveling coal out of the little bin in the back yard. She was humming cheerily at her work and readily led the way into the house.

In a bedroom were Subacus, the oldest of his three youngsters, the oldest 4 years old, peering at his blackened face and arms through the bars at the foot of their father's resting place.

Subacus' Story.

A Catholic sister was present, to see that the patient, bolstered up apparently by all the pillows in the place, did not overeat. His story was simple and direct. At 1 o'clock last Saturday, the pit boss came to measure my work in the northwest entry on the south side of the entry. After he went I waited for the team to come for the coal, but in two hours it had not come, so I started to find out what was the matter. Petty soon I saw smoke and felt that the ventilation fan had stopped. The fire had been burning for an hour, but that was the first I knew of it. I started to run then, but met George Eddy and some others about twenty-one in all—and Mr. Eddy led us away back where I had been working.

Try To Build Barrier.

"Then we tried to throw up a barrier, but it was pitted down, and we did not get along well. All the time we breathed bad gas. I had nothing to eat of my own, but I chewed bark and tried to run then, but met George Eddy and some others about twenty-one in all—and Mr. Eddy led us away back where I had been working."

IMPORTANCE OF BIG CASE.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 20.—In an opinion handed down to-day by Judge Walter H. Sanborn, of St. Paul, and concurred in by Judges Vandeventer, Hook and Adams, with a special concurring opinion by Judge Hook, of the United States Circuit Court for the Eastern district of Missouri, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey was declared an illegal combination, operating in restraint of trade, and its dissolution was ordered. The opinion of the court was filed simultaneously in St. Louis and in St. Paul.

In this decision the Government of the United States wins a sweeping victory, and, according to Frank B. Kellogg, of this city, who was the Government's special prosecuting officer, the Government has won every point for which it contended.

Appeal To Supreme Court.

The case will be appealed direct to the United States Supreme Court, as the judges who signed to-day's decree are in effect the judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, although they were sitting for the purpose of trying this case as the Circuit Court of the Eastern district of Missouri.

The decree of the court dissolving the Standard Oil Company comes effective in thirty days, when, no doubt, a stay will be granted for the purpose of an appeal. When the decree takes effect, unless a stay is granted, an injunction will issue restraining the Standard Oil Company from a further continuance of its business under its present formation.

Must Be Competition.

It appears from the concurring opinion written by Judge Hook that the company cannot do business under any other form with the subject of the competition. For Judge Hook on this subject says that it is thought with the end of the combination the monopoly will naturally disappear. But, should it not do so, and the members of the combination retire from it except one who might perpetuate the monopoly by the aggregation of the physical properties and instrumentalities, it would constitute a violation of the decree of the court.

In the trial of the case the point was made that the Standard Oil Company was a beneficiary corporation in that it, by reason of economy in operation, reduced the price of its product. This, Judge Hook says, have no weight.

Suit Instituted In 1906.

The suit terminated by to-day's decision was begun by direction of the Attorney General of the United States in St. Louis November 15, 1906. Frank B. Kellogg, of St. Paul, was special prosecutor, assisted by Charles B. Morrison, of Chicago; Frank H. Poole and J. H. Graves, of the Department of Justice; W. H. Higgins, of Minneapolis, and Corderio A. Severance, of St. Paul. The Standard Oil's legal talent was led by John G. Milburn, of New York. It's defense was that the present organization of the Standard Oil Company was the result of the natural growth of a great industry and that no statute had been violated.

The case is one of the most notable in the history of the Nation on account of the important industrial and legal questions and the financial interests it involves. The evidence filled twenty-one volumes and occupied more than 10,000 printed pages and the arguments of counsel more than 300 printed pages.

Decline To Discuss Case—Stock Declines A Few Points Only.

New York, Nov. 20.—F. P. Elliott, general counsel of the Standard Oil Company, said: "In the absence of the full text of the court's decision we can make no statement on the matter." John D. Archibald was at his home in Tarrytown, N. Y., when he was informed of the court's decision. Mr. Archibald said:

"I shall not make any statement, and if anything is said it must come from Mr. Elliott, the counsel for the company. Certainly there will be no statement in the matter to-day, for the decision dissolving the Standard Oil Company."

It was suggested at the office of the Standard Oil Company that a close analysis of the court's decision would Decision Will Aid Government In Other Cases Now Pending.

Washington, Nov. 20.—The news of the dissolution of the Standard Oil Company ordered by the Federal Court at St. Paul was greeted with gratifying to Government officials here.

The case besides its intrinsic importance on account of the enormous size of the Standard Oil Company, and the fact that it was the first time that the Standard Oil Company had been dissolved by the Supreme Court, was a landmark in the history of the Standard Oil Company. It was the first time that the Standard Oil Company had been dissolved by the Supreme Court.

HISTORY OF CASE.

Suit Filed In St. Louis At Instance of W. H. Moody, Attorney General.

St. Louis, Nov. 20.—The Government's suit to dissolve the Standard Oil Company was filed in the United States Circuit Court here to-day by William H. Moody, then Attorney General.

In petitioning for the dissolution of the New Jersey corporation and its subsidiaries the Government complained that the defendants had conspired "to restrain the trade and commerce in petroleum, refined oil and other products of petroleum among the several States and Territories of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and with foreign nations, and to monopolize the said commerce."

The Standard Oil Company was a combination of several States and Territories of the United States and in the District of Columbia, and with foreign nations, and to monopolize the said commerce."

WICKERSHAM PLEASED.

But Refuses To Comment Before Reading the Opinion.

Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 20.—"It is one of the most important decisions ever rendered in this country," declared George W. Wickersham, Attorney General, when apprised to-day of the decision dissolving the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Wickersham had just arrived at the Federal prison here when news of the decision was conveyed to him. He

SURPRISE AT WASHINGTON.

Official Circles Deeply Interested In "Trust-Busting" Decision.

Washington, Nov. 20.—(Special.)—The decision of the United States Circuit Court to-day in the suit brought to dissolve the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, which, of course, is the "grand-daddy" of all the lesser concerns being operated by the giant corporation, created something of a sensation in Government circles. The news spread all over Washington with-

In a few minutes after it was received over the wires. At first it could hardly be credited, as the first information naturally came in the shape of a bulletin. But later the papers came out on the streets and then it was known to a certainty that the Rockefeller combination had received what seemed to be a body blow at last.

During the last two years of the Roosevelt Administration there was a great deal of talk as to what the Government was going to do to the trusts through prosecution that could be pressed under the Sherman anti-trust law, but Mr. Roosevelt's lawyers up in the Department of Justice were appointed to talk chiefly, and they brought few, if any, of the much-talked-of "malefactors" to law. However, this decision rendered at St. Louis came as a sort of stunner and people are saying to-night that it really begins to look as if the Standard Oil combination had received what seemed to be a body blow at last.

Don't Experiment With Old-Fashioned Hair Dyes

—I Want to Prove the Truth at My Expense—

If your hair is partly gray or faded, just tell me in a letter. Then I will send you, without charge, a clear, pure liquid—enough for you to completely restore the original color to a lock of your hair. And so that you may apply it easily, I'll send you a special fine-toothed comb, also free.

Each application will bring back a little of the color to the gray hair in a mild, healthy manner until in a few days every gray hair will be restored to its original color. The color which will be especially pleasing to the eye because of its natural appearance.

Then to test the color, take the lock of hair and wash it in any way you wish—even curl it with a hot iron. Give it the most severe test you can, and you will find that the color is in the hair through and through, and really is lasting and natural.

But don't confuse this preparation for an instant with the troublesome Two Bottle Dyes, or the poisonous sugar-of-lead preparations having the thick, heavy sediment. They are greasy, sticky and disgusting to use, and rub off on everything they touch.

If you will make this test on a lock of hair at my expense, you will know that my preparation is as

Guest of Honor At An Informal Dinner.

SEUMUS M'MANUS TALKS OF HIS NATIVE LAND.

HOPES FOR BETTER DAYS IN THE EMERALD ISLE.

REVIVING THE OLD LANGUAGE.

Ireland has an incontestable copy-right on comedy and all other nations are in the plagiarist category if every Celt is of the same temperament as Seumus M'Manus, celebrated writer of Irish folklore, who was the guest of honor at an informal dinner at the Seelbach last night, given under the auspices of the Catholic Conversational Club of Louisville. Mr. M'Manus met prominent local men who left the Emerald Isle many years ago to attain success in this community.

The session lasted for four hours, during which time there was not a dull moment for the guest of honor as a humorist as well as a scholar and philosopher. He provoked much laughter with his original puns and won his hosts completely.

Mr. M'Manus is in Louisville en route to Indianapolis, where he will fill a lecture engagement, but he will address an audience to-morrow night at the home of the Knights of Columbus on Fourth avenue.

After the dinner Mr. M'Manus was engaged in conversation by those who arrived too late for the luncheon. Quite willingly, and with a twinkle in his eye that could not be mistaken, he went through the greater part of his conversation with the members of the club. He said, in effect, that Ireland is very much the same to-day as it was two generations ago, but that there is excellent reason to believe that conditions will begin to improve before very long.

Population Decreasing.

"The greatest drawback for Ireland to-day," said Mr. M'Manus, "lies in the fact that her population is decreasing fast and her wealth is departing for parts unknown. The young men and women born in Ireland who have great intellectual capacity and who are, therefore, of great promise, are emigrating to other countries. I believe I can safely say that 98 per cent. of this migration is beneficial to America. Coupled with the young men and women, it seems, averse to patronizing Ireland's own industries. This means that $700,000 goes out to other countries every year which, if it could be retained, would help largely to place the country in a better position than it now occupies."

Mr. M'Manus volunteered the information that he and other men of Ireland are now urging proposition upon the people of their country to give over the habit of patronizing the industries of other countries. This movement was started not so very long ago, and it is gaining in popularity to such an extent that those who are advocating the plan expect to see good results within a few years. A newspaper has been started in an Irish colony with Arthur Griffith, of Dublin, as editor, to spread the propaganda before the people. The circulation of the organ is growing rapidly.

In response to a query as to what plans the school systems are on in Ireland at the present time, Mr. M'Manus gave some information that will be welcomed by the old-time Irishmen of this city who have not seen their native shores in many years. He said that patriotic songs of the Emerald Isle were to the fact that the ancient Irish language was passing into obsolescence a year or two ago, but efforts are now being put forth to have it taught in all the public schools to keep it alive and in existence.

Reviving Irish Language.

"It was discovered," said Mr. M'Manus, "that the Irish language was decaying. This was not pleasant news by any means, for in a short time a movement was started to have the language taught in the schools to the young folk. The idea gained such favor that in 2,000 schools to-day the old language that was used universally throughout Ireland in the old days is being taught. It is reviving fast now and I am of the opinion that it will become as popular in time as it was in the past."

Mr. M'Manus is known to all Irishmen as a writer of humorous folklore and verse. He is considered a great poet by those who have a good knowledge of the Irish language, and a scholar and philosopher of high standing. He expects to get back to his native land by next spring. During his stay in America he will lecture in many of the larger cities of the United States.

RECEIVES COMMISSION FROM THE GOVERNOR.

David Hirsch May Attend Rivers and Harbors Congress In December.

David Hirsch last night received his commission from Gov. Augustus E. Wilson appointing him a delegate from the State to the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which will be in session in Washington, D. C., December 8, 9 and 10. Mr. Hirsch, as a member of the Ohio River Commission, has been a delegate to the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in Cincinnati last month and is thinking strongly of attending the National Congress in Washington. He said he would like to see a strong delegation go from Kentucky, as President Taft has recommended that the Ohio River be improved as soon as possible in the way of affording a good boating stage the year-round. Mr. Hirsch says that a large delegation from Kentucky would have much weight in Congress in the way of favoring the recommendation of the President.

Gov. Wilson has appointed delegates to the congress from all sections of the State and he is desirous that as many of the delegates attend the congress as possible. The information that Mr. Hirsch will go from Cincinnati and other cities throughout the State.

LOUISVILLE NEGROES TO GO AFTER EXPOSITION.

Want Celebration of Semi-Centennial of American Negroes' Freedom Held In This City.

A number of negroes met last night at the Douglas building, 725 West Walnut street, where an organization was formed for the purpose of putting forth a concerted effort to land for Louisville the place of holding the semi-centennial exposition of the emancipation of the American negro in 1913. It was decided to hold the exposition on row night, at which time an address to the public would be given, asking for support and encouragement in the new movement. The Rev. L. G. Jordan, who was elected president, stated that he had been informed that $700,000 goes out to other countries every year which, if it could be retained, would help largely to place the country in a better position than it now occupies.

Mr. M'Manus volunteered the information that he and other men of Ireland are now urging proposition upon the people of their country to give over the habit of patronizing the industries of other countries. This movement was started not so very long ago, and it is gaining in popularity to such an extent that those who are advocating the plan expect to see good results within a few years.

In response to a query as to what plans the school systems are on in Ireland at the present time, Mr. M'Manus gave some information that will be welcomed by the old-time Irishmen of this city who have not seen their native shores in many years. He said that patriotic songs of the Emerald Isle were to the fact that the ancient Irish language was passing into obsolescence a year or two ago, but efforts are now being put forth to have it taught in all the public schools to keep it alive and in existence.

Reviving Irish Language.

"It was discovered," said Mr. M'Manus, "that the Irish language was decaying. This was not pleasant news by any means, for in a short time a movement was started to have the language taught in the schools to the young folk. The idea gained such favor that in 2,000 schools to-day the old language that was used universally throughout Ireland in the old days is being taught. It is reviving fast now and I am of the opinion that it will become as popular in time as it was in the past."

Mr. M'Manus is known to all Irishmen as a writer of humorous folklore and verse. He is considered a great poet by those who have a good knowledge of the Irish language, and a scholar and philosopher of high standing. He expects to get back to his native land by next spring. During his stay in America he will lecture in many of the larger cities of the United States.

DOLL BAZAR

For Benefit of the Children's Free Hospital.

TO BE HELD AT THE WOMAN'S CLUB DECEMBER 4.

PRETTY GIRLS AS SALESWOMEN ON THAT OCCASION.

HOPE TO RAISE LARGE SUM.

The city of Louisville is soon again to be rocked from stem to stern in the throes of charity doings. This time folks are to get the gentle touch from certain women, numerous and diplomatic, who each year, for fourteen long years, have operated the Hospital Circle Doll Bazar at the Woman's Club. It is not known just how the first date was chosen from among the field of 364 other dates, but from the beginning the annual doll bazar for the sick children has been held on the first Saturday in December.

As most persons have been aware of this date for several winters and many summers, they have made it a point in the last few years to hang back with the bazaar, which is given to raise money for the Children's Free Hospital. It is not known just how the first date was chosen from among the field of 364 other dates, but from the beginning the annual doll bazar for the sick children has been held on the first Saturday in December.

The Doll Bazar.

Everybody in Louisville who is acquainted with the local charities, knows more or less about the annual Doll Bazar, which is given to raise money for the Children's Free Hospital. In years past thousands of people have designedly worked for the bazar, and many times in which willing victims have cultivated the hang-back change habit to such a nicety that they fairly tingled when the $50,000 hope of the bazaar was given to the Children's Free Hospital the first Saturday in December.

During the remainder of the year when the bazar is not in session the committee make in the money on a special occasion, get their hands in, so to speak, and see to it that the twenty or more children who are hopelessly crippled in at the hospital, and the youngsters, and the debutante or second-year girl who can "speak," "may decide to attend the bazar, and the committee make in the money on a special occasion, get their hands in, so to speak, and see to it that the twenty or more children who are hopelessly crippled in at the hospital, and the youngsters, and the debutante or second-year GRIDIRON STARS BATTLE TO TIE

Wisconsin and Chicago Game Ends 6 To 6 On Marshall Field.

SECOND PLACE UNDECIDED.

Anderson, of the Badgers, Put Up Many Brilliant Plays During Contest.

BOTH SCORE IN FIRST HALF.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Wisconsin and Chicago battled to a sensational 6 to 6 tie game on Marshall Field today, and when the final whistle blew there was no advantage on either side. Both teams scored in the first half, but the second half was a futile battle to push the ball across the goal line. The result of the game leaves possession of second place among Western teams still undecided. This is the second 6 to 6 tie Chicago has played within the last eight days.

Both teams played ruggedly at times and neither showed any great football ability. The majority of the plays were the old-fashioned sort, but now and then a forward pass and a side kick were used to relieve the monotony of the old-fashioned game.

Anderson's Play Brilliant.

While it is hard to pick any one man who played among his fellows what individual honor there was must be given to Anderson, the brilliant right half of Wisconsin. But he bore what appeared to be a charmed life, for at times he appeared to be tackled for a big yard, he would out and run down the line for substantial gains. In the first half Anderson clearly outplayed the Chicago line, and in the second half the kicking was practically even. Page's haphazard method of getting on the punt often caused the Chicago line to shoot him in the air for a short gain. At times in the second half Page did play what appeared to be poor generalship and punted after the second down with a yard or more to go.

Rogers, Worthine and Badenech played brilliantly, the first two making substantial gains at critical periods, while Badenech often broke through Wisconsin's lines and nipped the runner before he got a start.

The Wisconsin team was without the services of two of its stars, Culver and Moll, who were kept out of the game on account of injuries. Fieck played at quarterback and put up a good game, and on the form Moll displayed in the Minnesota game he was not missed. Peterson at left halfback in place of Culver tore off some good gains. Osthoff, the giant tackle, and Boyle were also responsible for many gains.

Facts and Figures of Football's Deadly Toll During Present Season

Ghastly Tale of Gridiron Shows Twenty-nine Killed and 209 Crippled, and Scores Hovering On the Brink of Death.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—(Special.)—Football has claimed its annual toll. Twenty-nine dead and 209 crippled, many for life, and scores still hovering on the brink of death in the surgical wards of hospitals throughout the land. That's the grim, ghastly tale of the gridiron covering a period of sixty-seven days.

Following is a summary of football's deadly toll during 1909:

The open game failed to be sans brutality by college athletes, wrought fearful havoc. Twenty-two of the dead were schoolboys under 20 years of age. Six college men, properly trained for the brutal encounters, were killed. The member of an athletic club or semi-professional team was placed on the altar.

Players Maimed and Dying.

Of the 209 players maimed, paralyzed and dying from the effects of the injuries sustained, 165 are wearers of college colors. The giants selected from near and far for the perils of the game, conditioned and trained to "pink" the enemy and for smashing contests, were forced to bear the brunt of the injuries. Thirty-nine schoolboys, many of them under 15 years of age, assisted in swelling the ghastly list. While only five semi-professional players were reported in the various papers.

As death after death was chronicled in columns of the country's daily papers, and the legislators in their respective States and urged that laws be enacted to curb the wild and reckless football, the figures this year are appalling, when compared to the count reported in the winter of 1908. In 1908, 150 players were killed and 204 sustained injuries.

Many Injured Players Succumbed.

Many of the injured players later succumbed to their hurts. Many were borne away to insane asylums. Last year the college folk defended the open style of football, but the winter of 1909 has shown that the injuries and deaths were due to the inexperience of participants in the game. With another year in which to become trained and experienced, the toll has increased rather than fallen away, according to the football statistics.

In the small towns where football claimed a victim, the parents, educators and the clergy took up a great hue and cry against the brutality of the game. Sometimes the injuries have been purely accidental, but the majority of them are due to lack of training or too much training. Oftentimes the accident follows when a small man is unequally pitted against a powerful strapping fellow.

The death of Edwin Byrne, cadet at the United States Military Academy, as the result of an injury sustained during the football at West Point this season, has been a sad commentary on the brutality of the game. The death of a young man at the hands of a fellow student is a tragedy that should not be repeated.

O'Brien Asking Support For Re-election As Executive

It Is Not True Thomas Chivington, the Local Man, Is Canvassing the Club Owners of American Association For Presidency—Six Magnates Oppose the Present Head.

JOSEPH D. O'BRIEN, president of the American Association, whose position as the executive head of the largest minor league is in jeopardy, has given out several interviews in which he has tried to make it appear that Tom Chivington, the Louisville baseball man, who has been mentioned as O'Brien's successor, has been begging the support of the club owners. These interviews were not given until Mr. Chivington was out of the way on a motorboat trip and where he would have no chance to deny them.

O'Brien says that he will not seek re-election, and with a show of dignity put himself in the position of a man who is sought by the office while Tom Chivington is pictured as a man seeking the job. The present head of the American Association has been due to his skillful administration of the affairs of this league, and that he will stand pat on his record.

Baseball men who know both O'Brien and Chivington will not be misled, for it is apparent to them that O'Brien, judging from the public expressions of the club owners, has himself pursued, while the latter has always taken the position that he would feel honored if the club owners should select him for the position, but he would make no canvass for support.

So long as O'Brien has seen fit to show the club owners that he is not a politician, it is in the hope of furthering his own interests, it is right and proper that Chivington's friends should know the facts.

Of the eight clubs in the league six, it is believed, are against O'Brien, judging from the public expressions of the club owners. Their opposition is due to repeated blunders in handling the umpires of this league and the attempts to establish rules in baseball, which is beyond his authority. He is also accused of trying to usurp the authority of the board of directors, and he has been accused of trying to force his own ideas on the club owners.

Baseball Politics Uncertain.

The outcome of his struggle to retain his position cannot be foretold, because baseball politics are uncertain. It is understood, however, that six clubs in the league are opposed to O'Brien, and whether O'Brien's supporters have power enough to force him out will be decided in the question.

Several men have been mentioned as possible successors to O'Brien, but Tom Chivington is by far the most prominent, and it looks as though it would resolve itself into the selection of one of these men, who for the most part are not known to the public, and who have not a practical baseball and business man.

His success in directing the affairs of the Louisville club as general manager, and his success in the past as a player, have been his chief assets. He has been closely identified with the affairs of the American Association since its inception, and he has no affiliations that could possibly be antagonistic to the league.

Chivington has always shown a disposition to keep the league in the hands of the club owners, and he has been a confidant of those who have transacted the business of the league.

There is no man available for the position, but Tom Chivington is in every respect the best man for the job. He has been the least doubtful, but it would be for the benefit of the American Association that Chivington be chosen to take the place of O'Brien.

Board of Directors Real Head.

The organization of the American Association is like that of the National League in that the board of directors is the real head of the league, and the only direct power given to the president is the selection and control of the umpires, and the construction of the playing rules. Practically all the rest of the work of the league is done under the authority and direction of either the board of directors or the club owners.

Central League Baseball Gossip.

So far as public announcement is made, the Central League is in a state of confusion. The league has been in a state of confusion since the first meeting of the board of directors. The league has been in a state of confusion since the first meeting of the board of directors.

There has been no bid for the franchise from another city, and besides, the South Bend fans all along have had in mind to keep the club, buying it from Ann Arbor, who prefers to put all his baseball eggs in the Grand Rapids basket. Grant may remain in South Bend as manager and not go with Ann to Grand Rapids under those conditions.

He has always stood well with the home fans, and without doubt, has proved that he can run a good club on as small expense as any manager in the league, which fact appeals to those who may be asked to subscribe to the fund to buy the club from Ann.

Frank Kilen and Gille Gill, the veterans of the league, want to get away, the former to the American Association, it is said, and the latter to the National League. Kilen, because the Central League figures have been changed for bigger ones, until now, and Gill, because he is better than in any other Class B league.

THE HAUTE, Nov. 20.—Conditions in the Central League are such that the fans are assured of a new order of things next season in line-ups, managers, umpires and perhaps better discipline in all directions. The circuit is not to be changed, and the league is to remain in the South Bend is to remain in this league.
